Tulpehocken Watershed Receives Conservation Funding

STOUCHSBURG (Berks Co.)
— When people hear the saying, "it was a real gully-washer," they could be referring to an area of a 125-acre dairy farm operated here by Richard and Nelson Troutman.

When it stormed, rains would cause such a flood of stormwater down the stone farm lane that, almost every time, the owners would have to haul stone and repair it, according to Richard Troutman.

But with the help of the conservation district and a 319 Water Quality Grant, in March last year a clean water collection system, including six collection boxes and 1,500 feet of pipe, was installed at a cost of $6,900.

Gone were the problems of lane loss to water. The outlet system would drain into a stream that feeds into the Tulpehocken Creek. Now the farm managers could concentrate on their feed and dairy work and less on farm lane erosion.

Similar farm improvement projects could be getting a new boost for farm owners in the Tulpehocken Creek watershed area.

Areas of Berks and Lebanon counties, through Public Law 566, will have access to cost-share funds from a multi-agency program to install a wide array of conservation practices on farms.

There are several major components to the $8.9 million program. Evaluation units include agricultural waste management, cropland treatment, riparian area treatment, wetland and floodplain conservation easements, and aquatic habitat improvement.

The Tulpehocken project allows up to $100,000 per farm in a 10-year period at 75 percent cost-share to participate, indicated

Charles W. Wertz, Lebanon County Conservation District manager.

According to Wertz, projects include waste management structures, barnyard runoff management, soil erosion control, stream bank fencing and crossings, riparian forest and buffer filters, and other projects.

Wertz noted the flexibility of the program. Farm managers can adopt aspects of the program to the farm. The government pays 75 percent of the total cost.

"If somebody has a serious sinkhole problem, the program could do sinkhole repair," Wertz said.

In the spring of 1997, grass waterways were installed to separate two corn fields where Richard Troutman stands. That is one of many programs the new watershed program can provide to farmers. Troutman said that the limestone, clay-bottom ground holds water in a dry year. Last year, despite a persistent drought, the farm harvested 150 bushels per acre of corn. Photo by Andy Andrews

Dairy Options Program In Your Mailbox

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.)
— Within the next four to six weeks, dairy producers in Berks, Bradford, Crawford, Chester, Franklin, and Lancaster counties should be carefully watching their mail. Producers in these counties will be receiving information about the Dairy Options Pilot Program that is being introduced by the Federal Risk Management Agency.

The Dairy Options Pilot Program (DOPP) is an educational effort, authorized by USDA, that provides financial assistance to producers in selected counties who want to begin using BFP milk options to limit their downside price risk. Six counties in each of — Milk is pasteurized. Why not the same for whole shell eggs? One business has learned to do just that. Pasteurized Eggs, L.P., a New Hampshire-based food technology company, demonstrated Big Pete, its egg pasteurizer, late last week. The demonstration was held before more than two dozen egg agri-industry representatives at the manufacturing facilities of Food Processing Systems in Greenfield Industrial Park.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)

"Weedy Retreat Mallards," an original painting by FFA member Greg Yoder, will go to the highest bidder at the auction held following the annual Fore FFA Golf Tournament to be held July 20. The proceeds will benefit the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation. Limited edition prints of the painting are also available through special orders. For more information, read the article about Greg and the upcoming benefit auction on page B 6. Photo and story by Lou Ann Good.

Farmers Should Be Prepared For Local Farm Tag Checks

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.)
— A recent legal incident involving a hay producer using a farm license tag on a rig to deliver a load for sale in Lancaster County has left that producer uncertain about what is expected of a farmer these days.

While the incident isn't completely over, the producer this week had to give up a day's work to travel four hours one-way to attend a rescheduled (at court's convenience, with a three-day notice) hearing in a Lancaster County locality.

As a result of the district justice hearing, all but two of the charges have been dismissed. The last two — one each for the same thing against the producer and his driver — are to be dismissed if the producer sends to the district justice, through certified mail, a notarized statement giving evidence of the leasing of the farmland from which the hay came.

Though willing to be identified, it seems that the specific identity of the individuals involved aren't necessarily important.

What seems most important is whether the incident is isolated or if it is a common incident.

According to the producer involved, in his discussions with other producers, there have been

Daily National Grain Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Tue Jun 30, 1998
USDA-MO Dept. Ag
Market News

Grain and soybean bids rebound after yesterday's sharp declines. Wheat 1-6 cents higher. Corn 4-10 cents higher. Sorghum 12 cents higher. Soybeans 16-21 cents higher. This morning's USDA stocks report was lower than most traders expected.

As of June 1 wheat stocks were estimated at 723 million bushels. Other spring wheat acreage were shown a 15.25 million acres which is down from May 1 estimate. Higher corn prices also supported wheat bids. Corn bids were sharply higher due to smaller than expected acreage estimates by USDA. Some fund buying on the Board was noted and loss of acres to recent flooding also factors.

USDA estimated soybean stocks at 45 million bushel lower than traders anticipated. Spillover strength from wheat and corn pits added to higher bean bids. PRO-LIX
LIQUID FEED

In the dairy business, income over feed cost is the name of the game. Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements offer dairymen the means to maximize this value while getting the most from their cow's natural abilities.

Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements are concentrated sources of just what ordinary feeds lack: protein, energy, vitamins, minerals -- everything animals need for economical milk production and growth.

For replacement heifers, Pro-Lix means faster maturity and assurance that they'll get to the milking herd on time. If you trust your heifers to forage alone, they might not make it. (Bouvatec Is Available)

For lactating cows, the nitrogen content of Pro-Lix means plenty of protein available for milk production and growth.

Finally, for dry cows, Pro-Lix not only helps maintain their health during the dry period it prepares them for the next lactation. The Ca P ratio in Pro-Lix helps control milk fever, while the Vitamin E and selenium aids in clean-up after the birth of a calf.

Best of all, Pro-Lix works with all types of pasture grass or forage, as a free-choice supplement, a top-dressing, or a ration mix.

FULL THUNDER MOON, JULY 9.

SUMMER'S WONDER

Under do gally the beans," they say in England, meaning a summer thunder will frighten the beans into growing faster. A winter thunder means summer hunger, however. The first thunder of the season is said to awaken the frogs and snakes. Thunder in the morning brings wind, some prognosticators say, while a noon thunder brings rain and an evening thunder brings a tempest. If there's lightning without thunder, fair weather is on the way. As for the wind direction, "Thunder and lightning in the summer show, / The point from which the freshening breeze will blow."

When it thunders, the thief becomes honest.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Hull strawberries by pushing a drinking straw through the berry from the bottom.

STRAWBERRY CREAM

3 pints fresh strawberries
2 tablespoon kirsch, optional
3 tablespoons sugar
1-1/4 cups whipping cream
mint leaves, to garnish

Set aside 8 to 10 perfect berries for garnish. Clean and hull the rest, then puree in a blender. Blend in the kirsch and sugar. Whip the cream in a chilled bowl, then fold in the pureed strawberry mixture. Spoon into glasses, or into a single glass dessert bowl, and refrigerate until ready to serve. Garnish with mint leaves and whole strawberries.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Did you know R/W has the lawn vacuum hose and hose clamps. I picked up 6" heavy duty for the John Deere rider for $7.35ft. They had it in all different sizes.
We also found rubber grain hose there.

While I waited for Belt Lacing, they made me gaskets that the dealer could no longer get.

Did you know R/W has concrete anchors for all you needs. They even beat the hardware stores boxed price.

Worked on the tractor and my knee's aren't sore. R/W has a thing called a KNEELER for $4.95ea. My wife got one for the garden and the son one to sit on at school games.

R/W Connection is the source for tubing and fittings. Our knowledgeable staff backed by the leading manufacture of domestic tubing will get what you need.

Agriculture Makes America Strong

On Independence Day, we celebrate the strength of America and the good things we enjoy as a nation. Many people don't seem to realize the fact that one of our strengths is the impact agriculture presents to the economy.

Agriculture is often presented as insignificant because only two percent of the population is involved in farming. This may be true, but it is not relevant to the real picture. We as an agribusiness industry do ourselves a tremendous disservice to allow the public to assign a sense of minor importance to the food production system. If we count the agriservice, processors, support services, truck drivers, and distributors, the total food production system accounts for 27 percent of the U.S. economy and about 20 percent of the employment.

If our farmers don't farm, not only do the people not eat, 20 percent of them are also out of a job. Every nation that is dependent on foreign agriculture for a food supply has an inherent weakness. America's agriculture makes America strong.

To Look For Aphids

Aphids are small, soft bodied insects that feed on plant fluids, according to Dr. Timothy Elkner, Lancaster County Horticultural Agent. They vary in color and may be found in green, yellow, red, purple, brown or black.

These insects cause damage to plants by removing fluids, by the toxic action of saliva they inject into plants while feeding and by spreading viruses which are harmful to plants. The feeding activity of aphids can stunt plant growth and deform leaves and fruit.

Many types of aphids also secrete a sticky, sugar rich substance called "honeydew". The honeydew will fall onto leaves, fruit or branches of the plant. It will also fall on cars, picnic tables and driveways.

A black fungus called sooty mold will then grow on the sugar rich honeydew and may ruin the appearance of the plant as well as driveways and furniture. Honeydew will also attract ants, flies, hornets and yellowjackets.

To Control Aphids

Dr. Timothy Elkner, Lancaster County Extension Horticultural Agent, reminds us controlling aphids is easier if you take action before the population becomes too large. Many people have successfully disrupted the life cycle of aphids by washing the insects from their plants with a strong stream of water. Beneficial insects may also be effective in controlling aphids.

Ladybugs are one important predator of aphids. Lacewings, some flower flies and parasitic wasps are other predators that are often not noticed. If the aphid population is very large, the most effective means of control is the use of a registered insecticide.

There are many products labeled for the control of aphids. Remember, when using any pesticide, always read the label and follow the directions on the label.

To Protect Food After Storms

The recent storms we have experienced reminds us that power outages may occur. During power outages, you will want to preserve the cold air inside your refrigerator and freezer.

If it looks like the power failure may be of short duration, keep the door closed. According to Nancy Wiker, Lancaster County Extension Family and Consumer Sciences Agent, a refrigerator should keep foods safely cold for 6 hours, depending on room temperature. A freezer will hold foods much longer - up to two days if it is a free standing freezer that is fully loaded or about a day for a partially loaded.

If it looks like the power outage will last for more than a few days, buy some dry ice for the freezer. If the power is going to be out more than 6 hours, refrigerated food may have to be discarded. If the electricity continues to be out more than two days, then the freezer food may have to be thrown out as well.

Remember, ice crystal are a good indication that the food is still cold enough to be safe.

Background Scripture:
Proverbs 2:1-15
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 53:1-6

The books of Ecclesiastes, Job and Proverbs are called "the Wisdom Books" of the Bible. The purposes of these books is not to tell a story, but to impart wisdom, a characteristic highly valued by the Hebrews.

The Book of Proverbs is different than Job and Ecclesiastes in that it is simply a large collection of proverbs — wise and vivid sayings especially, but not exclusively, for the instruction of the young. Historically, Proverbs is a compendium of the religious and moral instruction given to Jewish youth by professional sages in the period after the return from the Babylonian captivity, although many of the proverbs date to much earlier times.

Many of us remember some of the proverbs our parents taught us: "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." "People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones." "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." The genius of proverbs is that they say so much in so few words. The source of proverbial wisdom is experience and the purpose is always practical: to help us live wisely.

DATA vs. WISDOM

Maybe the reason we do not very often hear proverbs quoted today is that wisdom is not highly valued in our society. It is said that we live in an "information age." But information by itself does not add up to wisdom. Computers may supply us with more information than we can use, but not the wisdom with which to use it.

What is really valued in our world today is toughness and power. In every political campaign I read ringing testimonies that this or that candidate is "tough" on crime, spending, corruption or on whatever they think people want them to be tough. I rarely hear of anyone being celebrated for their wisdom. That brings to mind a little passage from Ecclesiastes 9:14-16:

There was a little city with a few men in it; and a great king came against it and besieged it . . . But there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city. Yet no one remembered that poor man. But I say that wisdom is better than might, though the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heeded.

SEEKING AND FINDING

Proverbs 2 sums up the themes of the whole book. First, says the sage, if you truly seek wisdom from the Lord, you will receive it. "If you cry out for insight and raise your voice for understanding, if you seek it like silver and search for it as for hidden treasure; then you will understand the fear of the Lord and find the knowledge of God (2:3-5). In New Testament times Gnostics taught that the gospel was a mystery that could be known by only a select few, but the Old Testament sage indicates that the only bar to wisdom is our own personal desire and receptivity.

Secondly, the sage says that if we accept the wisdom God imparts to us, then it will show up in our living. The wise person will "walk in integrity, guarding the paths of justice and equity." Knowing what to do is only half of it; doing it is the other inseparable half. So we seek wisdom, not to accumulate a mental library of teachings, but to live wisely in the sight of God.

Third and finally, if we receive wisdom and live wisely, there are great benefits from the Lord: "Discretion will watch over you, understanding will guard you; delivering you from the way of evil, from men of perverted speech . . . men whose paths are crooked . . . (11-15).

Elbert Hubbard once said: "Every man is a damn fool for at least five minutes every day. Wisdom consists in not exceeding that limit." With God's help we can stay within the limit.

The staff of the Pennsylvania Farm Show gathers together in the Small Arena of the state Farm Show Complex for a group photo in recognition of being named the top rodeo/livestock event of the year by Events Business News, a publication of the special events industry in United States and Canada. Some of the faces are familiar, such as state Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes Jr., in the coat and tie, who stands with Farm Show Director Dennis Grumbine, who dons a chef's apron, in the lower right corner, next to the purebred Angus heifer. Some of the faces are those of behind-the-scenes workers. They all work together to help make the Farm Show Complex a viable entity capable of serving as host for the state's annual Farm Show, in addition to many other shows, exhibitions and events during the year, as well as a professional indoor soccer team. The Angus heifer was borrowed from the national Angus show held last week at the same time the Farm Show staff was treated to a barbeque event and ceremony to recognize the achievements of the staff and the significance of the award. Though glare obscures the large sign in the back row, it states that Pennsylvania's 1998 Farm Show is America's No. 1 livestock and rodeo event.

Dairy Situation And Outlook

Bob Cropp
Dairy Marketing and Policy Specialist
University of Wisconsin
Cooperative Extension

Compared to a year ago, May milk production for the 20 reporting states showed the greatest relative increase this year, up 2.1% compared to an April increase of 1.3%. Estimated accumulated U.S. milk production January through May is up 1.1% from the same period a year ago. May milk cow numbers were just 0.2% below a year ago, the smallest decrease for more than two years. Milk per cow was up about normal, 2.3%.

A major change in milk production from previous months was a return to increased milk production in California. After a decline in milk production compared to a year ago of 2.0% in April, California had a 3.2% increase for May. This was not due to more milk per cow, which was down 0.5%, but rather more milk cows, up 3.8%. Milk per cow is still suffering from wet weather related problems earlier in the year.

California farmers are also running short of high quality hay. The new year hay crop is of low quality due to wet harvesting conditions. Some farmers are cutting back on hay fed per cow and substituting other feeds. What impact this will have on California's milk production for the immediate months ahead is uncertain, but some nutritionist indicate that even with substitutes for high quality hay, California will be able to maintain an increase in milk production. But it does appear that California's milk production increases will continue to be well below last year's.

Both Idaho and Washington experienced rather poor increases in May milk production per cow, up respectively just 0.6% and 0.8%. Because Idaho had 8.2% more milk cows, total milk production was still up 8.7% while fewer milk cows netted Washington 1.1% less total milk production.

New Mexico had just 0.6% more milk per cow but 8.0% more milk cows which resulted in 8.5% more total milk production. Texas had 2.6% more milk per cow but fewer milk cows that netted a 0.9% decrease in total milk production. Arizona had just 1.3% more milk per cow but more cows increased total milk production 2.3%.

Hot weather played a toll on milk production in the south and southeast. Florida had a 7.3% decrease in milk per cow and a reduction in total milk production of 7.3%.

Milk per cow was up only 0.4% for both Kentucky and Missouri and total milk production was down respectively, 5.8% and 5.7%. Forecast are for a continuation of hot weather in the south and possible drought conditions by late summer. This could affect milk production this summer and fall and the amount of Grade A milk the southeast will need to ship in from other states to meet fluid needs. This activity does strengthen milk prices.

Milk production in the northeast is mixed. New York had no change from a year ago due to 0.3% less milk per cow offsetting 0.4% more milk cows, while Pennsylvania had 4.0% more milk production because of 4.7% more milk per cow from 0.6% fewer milk cows. Ohio had 1.0% more milk, but Michigan experienced 0.6% less milk.

Wisconsin had 1.8% fewer milk cows but excellent milk per cow, up 4.9% resulted in an increase in total milk production of 3.0%. Minnesota had good milk per cow, up 2.8% but 2.6% fewer milk cows meant only a slight increase in milk production.

Despite milk production running higher than a year ago and commercial disappearance a little soft (up just 0.4% from January-March), butter and cheese prices keep increasing. Cheese prices took a decline April to early May. NASS 40 pound cheddar block prices average about 10 cents less per pound in May than for April.

This lower average NASS cheese price, a lower April base price than what was estimated ($11.82 and not the $12.01 April BFP), plus a relatively high butterfat differential adjustment to 3.5% butterfat test resulted in a May BFP of $10.88, down $1.13 per hundredweight from April. But both butter and cheese prices have taken a strong turn upward. From May 7 to June 4, CME 40 pound cheddar blocks increased 28.25 cents per pound ($1.21 to $1.4925). CME cheddar barrels increased 24.5 cents per pound ($1.20 to $1.445). Both cheddar blocks and barrels increased another 5 cents per pound on June 11.

But the BFP is adjusted by changes in the NASS survey 40 pound cheddar block price and not the CME price. The NASS survey price lags behind the CME prices. While the CME block price increased 28.25 cents per pound from May 7 to June 5, the weekly average NASS block prices increased just 11.17 cent per pound from the week ending May 8 through the week ending June 5. Therefore the expected increase in the June BFP is less with NASS prices than what one would anticipate from CME prices.

These relatively strong cheese prices exist despite cheese production above a year ago. April production compared to a year ago show production of American cheese up 3.5%, cheddar production up 1.8% and total cheese production up 7.2%.

But strong committed sales when cheese prices dropped in April and May has meant available "fresh" cheese supplies are tight. Wholesale buyers are not available to purchase additional cheese and are bidding cheese prices higher.

Butter prices increased 20 cents per pound since the end May. Both Grades AA and A on the CME are at $1.90 per pound. Cream supplies are tight as ice cream manufacturers compete with butter makers. April butter production was down 12.5% from a year ago. Butter stocks are about 68 million pounds. But as recent as 1992 when the CCC was purchasing lots of surplus butter stocks stood at 781 million pounds. Butter supplies and prices should stay strong until at least late fall.

What does this all mean as far as the BFP? At these cheese and butter prices the June BFP will increase from May more than $2.50 surpassing $13.00 per hundredweight to perhaps $13.25 to $13.40 per hundredweight. The BFP futures are trading near these levels. This compares to a June BFP of just $10.74 a year ago. As we look down the road further strengthening of the BFP appears likely. The BFP could peak in September near $14.00 per hundredweight before starting to decline.

At these levels of milk prices and forecasts for relatively cheap corn and soybeans, and excellent quality hay at lower prices, except for the west and northwest, milk production this fall could be fairly strong. If so, cheese and butter prices could fall sharply. There is also concern that the relatively high butter and cheese prices will dampen demand.

But if crop conditions are not as favorable and milk per cow is adversely affected by hot weather, prices will still decline seasonally late fall, but at a slower rate and not as far. Because of this price uncertainty, dairy producers may want to consider protecting milk prices via of dairy futures and options. The BFP futures prices are trading at relatively attractive levels.

Regardless, milk prices for 1998 will average above those of 1997.

Cattlemen's Field Day Looks At Pasture, Land, Breeding

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Techniques in forage and pasture management will be the theme at the 23rd Annual Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Summer Field Day, Saturday, July 18, at the McElhaney Stock Farm and the Hookstown Fairgrounds in Hookstown.

The event also will be an opportunity for Pennsylvania cattlemen to demonstrate environmentally friendly processes now in use by livestock producers, according to Dr. Lowell Wilson, Penn State professor of animal science and secretary of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association.

"Our theme and demonstration projects were selected to show that beef producers and others are looking to conserve and replenish our natural resources at the same time they are using them," Wilson said. "It's all part of being better caretakers of our land and water. This event will be of interest to beef, dairy and sheep producers; but it's also a good opportunity for non-farm people to learn more about sustainable methods of livestock production."

New practices and technologies used for water control, estrus synchronization and grazing management systems are among the special topics planned. Other demonstrations will include ova transplant procedures, pasture species selection, fencing programs and hoof trimming.

Liability issues connected with the use of electrically charged fencing and other farming practices will be the focus at a special luncheon sponsored by Mid-Atlantic Genetic Productions. Dr. Terry Etherton, head of Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, also will discuss challenges and opportunities confronting the animal industries. The Pennsylvania State Shorthorn Show will be held on Sunday morning at the Hookstown Fairgrounds.

Other field day activities include a tour of the Duquesne Light Nuclear Power Plant of the Beaver Valley Power Station, followed by the All-Breed Beaver County Junior Show. Afternoon and evening activities include a Keystone steak dinner and music and dancing at the farm. The event will close with fitting and showing demonstrations on Sunday, July 19. Exhibits and presentations will be staffed by representatives of Penn State Cooperative Extension and faculty members of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, as well as by staff from the Beaver County Natural Resource Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The event is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (PCA), the Pennsylvania Shorthorn Association and the Washington County Cattlemen's Association, in cooperation with Penn State Cooperative Extension and the university's Department of Dairy and Animal Science.

Registration will be from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. at the McElhaney Stock Farm. Admission is free to anyone interested in animal agriculture. More information can be obtained by calling PCA at (814) 692-4208, McElhaney's Stock Farm at (724) 573-9043, the Penn State Department of Dairy and Animal Science at (814) 863-3659, or Penn State Cooperative Extension in Beaver County at (724) 774-3003.

Bureau Praises Coalition

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau President John Lincoln, a dairy farmer from Ontario County, recently praised several groups who joined Farm Bureau to call for passage of the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact.

Lincoln called the group, which included consumer organizations Hunger Action Network and Just Food, environmental organizations Scenic Hudson and civic group the City Club of New York, "a diverse coalition of organizations which encompass a wide variety of interests yet all support passage of the Dairy Compact legislation."

President Lincoln said, "The organizations that have come together today is a clear example of how important the dairy industry is to this state's consumers, environmentalists, economists and local business owners. United together in support of passage of this Compact, these organizations are sending a clear message to the Assembly to pass the Compact legislation."

The press conference also provided an opportunity for the largest agricultural lending organization in the Northeast, Farm Credit, to provide results of a recent study on the future of the dairy industry in the Northeast.

"From examining the report compiled by Farm Credit, it is quite clear that the future of dairy farming is, at best, uncertain, if not declining. The Dairy Compact is a mechanism that could help improve that picture," Lincoln said. "It is vital that the Assembly pass the Compact legislation before our Assembly members conclude their business in Albany."

President Lincoln said, "Passage of the Dairy Compact legislation helps dairy farmers, the environment, and consumers. It provides a stable, equitable payment to dairy farmers for their fluid milk. By helping these dairy farmers stay in business, the environment stays healthy, open spaces and New York's grand vistas remain intact, and consumers continue to receive a fresh, locally produced product."

Milk quality standards remain high

The dairy industry is proud that it can guarantee customers they are buying the freshest quality products every day. Milk and milk products must pass up to 10 tests before a product can be sold to consumers. Federal and state regulations constantly monitor the quality of milk at every step, from the cow to the table.

Milk quality starts on the farm. Dairy producers work closely with veterinarians to ensure herd health and medication guidelines are followed, often using a producer-developed, voluntary 10-part Quality Assurance Program. Milk haulers collect samples from each day's shipment for on-site testing which evaluates butterfat and bacteria levels. Samples are also saved for further testing at the processing plant before the milk is loaded onto trucks heading toward retail or foodservice outlets.

The only thing the program needs from the farmer is a proposal that describes the kind of work to be done. After an inventory and evaluation of each farm by the Natural Resource Conservation Service, a timetable for the conservation practice implementation will be set.

Under the auspices of the program, farmers can take five years to sign up and another five years to implement the program, according to Kim Fies, conservation specialist with the Berks County Conservation District. The Berks office will act as a "clearinghouse" for proposals under the PL 566 program. Fies will be the central contact person for the program.

"There are more than 300 farms in the watershed that can benefit from the program," said Fies.

Groundwork on the PL 566 program began about two years ago, involving about 27 different federal, state, and local agencies, according to Charles Wertz of the Lebanon district. This project is sponsored by the Berks County Conservation District and Berks County Conservancy.

A variety of different agencies provided "multiple inputs" for the program. The sponsors received funding authorization approval in February this year and have been asked to seek landowners to sign up.

In the past, under programs of this sort, according to Fies, cost sharing was in the amount of 65 percent. But this program provides a hefty 75 percent cost sharing.

An "assessment" of the program was mailed at the beginning of May to landowners in the Berks and Lebanon County Tulpehocken Watershed areas, with a self-addressed reply requested. The responses, in some areas, have been good. About 25 landowners have responded with interest in the waste management systems area, about 11 more than the goal of the program for the planned timeframe. About 24 responded to interest in the barnyard runoff programs, twice more than planned for the same timeframe.

However, for interest in the nutrient management systems part of the program, 4,500 acres was the projected goal. As of early last week, only 4,213 acres were under requests from landowners. The soil erosion goal of 5,700 acres for the program amounted to only 4,755 acres as of last week.

In wetlands preservation, out of a goal of 30 acres, only eight acres are in interest.

These goals have been set as part of the federal program, according to Wertz.

Wertz believes the program's fish and wildlife habitat components could help mitigate a difficult situation in Jackson Township, Lebanon County. Discovery of a bog turtle has put a park project on hold. Wertz believes the park and turtle could co-exist with design and implementation of a plan made possible through the PL 566 project.

"Many farmers are accepting the need for buffers and their impact on nutrient loads," according to the district manager. "It is not costing (landowners) a lot. They are not seeing real estate values going down the drain." Many of these programs will work to abate sediment load in the Tulpe-

On the Tulpa-Canal farm owned by Floyd and Janice Martin and family near Womelsdorf, a crossing over the Tulpehocken was installed, together with stream bank fencing. Here, Kim Fies inspects the crossing.

On the Troutman farm, projects were installed to help manage nutrients, ensure stream bank stability, stem soil erosion, and ultimately improve herd health.

A farm contains a concrete agricultural crossing structure installed over a stream, also with stream bank protection.

With the help of the conservation district, in March last year a clean water collection system, including six collection boxes and 1,500 feet of pipe, was installed at a cost of $8,000. Troutman inspects one of the boxes in the farm lane.

hocken, which feeds into the Blue Marsh.

With stream bank fencing, cattle will be kept out of the Tulpehocken and this will reduce sediment load substantially, he noted.

On the Troutman farm, similar projects were installed to help manage nutrients, ensure stream bank stability, stem soil erosion, and ultimately improve herd health.

In February 1996, about 1,400 feet of stream bank fencing was installed to stabilize the streambed near where cattle graze using 319 funds.

A portion of the fencing is cut into a "V" shape to allow cattle limited access to the water. The system includes double-wire, high-tensile, Australian-type fence.

A few years ago, a laneway was constructed over the stream, using a 24-inch pipe and crushed stone.

Also, in the spring of 1997, grass waterways were installed to separate two corn fields.

Richard Troutman said that the limestone, clay-bottom ground holds water in a dry year. Last year, despite a persistent drought, the farm harvested 150 bushels per acre of corn. All hay and corn is chopped for silage.

Troutman installed two earthen-bank manure storage structures. Each provides 6-month storage. One, measuring eight feet deep, includes a cement-bottom storage with 120,000 gallons of capacity near a feedlot constructed where

There are similar projects that have already been installed on local farms. One Marion Township farm completed construction on this concrete-lined manure impoundment structure, installed in the spring of last year, inspected by Kim Fies of the Berks conservation district. The poured wall storage structure contains 8-inch thick by 8-feet long forms arranged in a rectangular shape, to a depth of about 8 feet.

Another, also an earthen bank with cement floor built about 20 years ago measuring 12 feet deep, includes six-month storage at a capacity approaching 400,000 gallons.

With stream bank protection, herd health has improved, according to Troutman. Hoof health and somatic cell counts have become more manageable.

The Land O'Lakes cooperator herd average is 20,000 pounds.

Kim Fies noted that "all practices must be part of a conservation plan to be developed along with whatever systems the landowner wants." On June 6, the local districts asked for $200,000 in funding to be released for the program.

The manure, scraped into the structure from a feedlot, can be agitated and pumped out. The structure took about two weeks to complete.

On the Tulpa-Canal farm owned by Floyd and Janice Martin and family near Womelsdorf, a crossing over the Tulpehocken was installed, together with stream bank fencing. Another nearby farm contains a concrete agricultural crossing structure installed over a stream, also with bank protection.

Tools for Transition, Expo Topic July 29

HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — Soil quality and soil conservation have continued to be an important issue for farmers, researchers, and the general public. "Soil is my most valuable asset," said Steve Groff, owner of Cedar Meadow Farm, Holtwood.

"I want to farm in such a way that produces a healthy food product, generates an income to live a comfortable lifestyle, and leaves the soil in better condition than when I found it," he said. Groff's "New Generation Cropping System" techniques will be on display at the 5th Annual Lancaster County Conservation District Expo and Field Day, July 29, 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. at Cedar Meadow Farm, Holtwood, Pa.

The event is sponsored by Cedar Meadow Farm, Lancaster County Conservation District, Foundation Earth, and the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture.

The Expo will provide an opportunity to see the farm's unique cropping strategies and proven soil conservation methods with more than 30 agribusiness exhibitors and equipment dealers. Cedar Meadow Farm has been selected as the 1998 Outstanding Cooperator of the Year by the district. It has also been chosen as one of nine farms in the nation to be a Harmony Demonstration Farm, promoting the adoption of technologically advanced and environmentally sound farming practices.

The Conservation Expo is conducted by the Lancaster County Conservation District and promotes conservation education, techniques and practices for farmers, businesses, and homeowners. The Expo will feature the Lancaster County Safe Kids Coalition and children's activities, nutrient management information, groundwater quality and water testing for nitrates, Pennsylvania Septage Management Association, Master Gardeners, Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Donegal Trout Unlimited, and local watershed associations. Participants should bring a pint of water for free water testing and children should bring shoes or sneakers they can get wet for an aquatic study on the farm.

The theme for the Field Day is "Tools for Transitioning" and will showcase equipment and methods of transitioning to less tillage and pesticides for a more environmentally friendly, profitable cropping system. Speakers for the day will include Warren Thompson, national forage specialist for America's Alfalfa, Kentucky, on no-till establishment of alfalfa and forages and grazing strategies; Dan Towery, national resources specialist from the Conservation Technology Information Center, Indiana, on conservation trends; Marty Campfield, Nutrient Solution in Agriculture, on precision agriculture; Dr. Ray Weil and Joel Gruver, University of Maryland, on soil quality. Three new summer annual grazing crops — spring triticale, Canadian field peas, and sudex — will be available to observe. Local equipment dealers will demonstrate no-till planters, drills, and conservation tillage tools.

The event is designed to give farmers practical information on transitioning to a profitable and sustainable cropping system, said Groff. "I want people to take home at least one idea that they can apply to their farm to improve the quality of their soil so that future generations will also have the opportunity to earn a living from the land."

The meeting begins at 11 a.m. A picnic-type lunch will be provided.

Reservations are required and can be made by calling the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension office by Monday, July 6; telephone number is (717) 394-6851. Bring your own lawn chairs.

The Zug farm is located about two miles north of Wakefield and one-half mile west of Route 272 at the junction of Pilgrims Pathway and Peters Creek Roads.

"It's a lot easier to finish these projects where there is help," said Kim Fies of the Berks district.

"Definitely, there are more people doing these projects, after talking to neighbors who know it's a good thing to do," said Charles Wertz of the Lebanon district. "But there's a lot more to do."

some anecdotal stories of those with farm tags getting pulled over and cited, and charges subsequently dropped, by the same department, and others in the Lancaster area, where, because of the intensity of agricultural production, farm commodity hauling is relatively high.

In general, of the several police departments and agencies contacted to determine if there is a common interpretation of the farm tag law, and what enforcement policies may be, the answer seems to be: they all interpret the law as written.

However, common sense dictates that there is a difference between interpretation of a law as published in black and white, and what satisfies the judgement of an officer in a cruiser who pulls over a truck with farm tags.

The heart of the issue is this: Among all enforcement agencies charged with enforcing the same set of laws, each agency, and to some degree each officer, follows a slightly different pattern or policy (generally an unwritten set of rules) in actually carrying out that enforcement.

That is the crux of all enforcement issues — the officer makes the call. If he believes that there is just reason to suspect a violation and information is not made available to indicate otherwise, he can write the citation.

That should be no surprise, since enforcement officers are humans, and each is asked, at least to some degree, to use their judgement to determine if a law has or hasn't been broken.

Notwithstanding, the incident this week demonstrated that there is a need for some type of general advisory to those who use farm tags as to what to expect and what to do to satisfy enforcement efforts.

The incident this week involved the interpretation by a local municipal law enforcement officer (considered to be expert in traffic law according to a department peer) of the farm truck law.

Basically, the officer had cited the hay producer for illegally using his farm tags for the business of "brokering" hay.

The rig driver who was stopped and questioned by the officer (for an hour and a half, according to the driver) was not the producer or the owner of the vehicle. He was instead the producer's employee of six years.

According to the producer, his driver makes at least several trips per week to Lancaster to deliver hay.

Normally, the hay producer uses a commercially licensed truck-trailer combination to deliver the hay from some of the 20 farms he rents, or from the one he owns.

However, during one week earlier this year, the commercial truck broke down.

As a backup for just such an emergency, and to use regularly for hauling loads and equipment between farms, the producer has an older truck-trailer rig he owns that is registered with farm plates.

On the third trip to Lancaster using the farm plates to deliver a load, the driver was pulled over by a local municipal officer, and the trouble began.

According to the driver, when asked by the officer where the hay came from, he told him. Since the farm name wasn't the same as the driver's boss, the officer asked him if his boss owned the farm.

The driver said, "No."

It seems apparent, from the citations issued, and some of the statements made during a portion of hearing, that the officer suspected that the producer was not a producer at all, but a middleman attempting to evade having to purchase the more expensive commercial tags in order to ship commodities.

That is illegal.

The driver of the rig — not an expert on the farm tag law, but knowing that his employer wouldn't send him out on a job illegally — didn't know what information the officer needed to have his suspicions satisfied.

What he could have said, according to courtroom second sight, was that his employer operated the farm and the load was his boss's hay.

In the use of a farm tag, travel is restricted to: on-the-farm use; between different farms operated by the truck owner; from the farm or farms under the operation to a place of business for the sale or purchase of commodities (such as an auction), and ultimately, if the farm truck is to be used for final delivery from the place of sale, to that place.

But ownership of farmland isn't required. The farmland just has to be controlled, or "operated," by the person to whom the farm tag and truck are registered.

Apparently the officer didn't pursue his questioning efforts far enough to avoid the mistaken assumption.

He didn't issue citations immediately. In the subsequent citations and summons that were mailed, however, he also didn't provide any instructions to give him a call directly, if the facts weren't straight.

The producer said he thought that calling the officer's superiors and providing the information to them would straighten out the mess. It didn't. He said that he tried for six weeks to contact the officer, and that he was told that the officer couldn't be reached in that time.

The hay producer called the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau for advice, and was provided with copies of the law and PennDOT guidelines on interpreting the law for enforcement.

He called the Department of Transportation, which local officers use as a reference resource on the enforcement of traffic laws. He said he attempted to contact the official there to whom he was referred, though calls were never returned.

He faxed copies of the law and explanations why he was not in violation of the law. There was no acknowledgement of receipt or returned calls.

So the case went forward.

In the meantime, he was upset. Not only was he faced with ridiculous charges, but also erroneously calculated fines totalling more than $4,000.

Even after receiving assurances from personal friends employed in law enforcement, that in their opinion the charges would be dropped, that he was in compliance, and that the local officer may be somewhat overenthusiastic in handing out citations, the producer said he felt no mental relief.

He would have to give up a day of production and travel four hours one way (a total of at least 10 hours when court time and return travel are included) in order to attend a hearing where he would have charges dismissed.

Not only would that cost him in production and income, but his hired man would have to attend. That represented unnecessarily wasted salary and travel expenses for an employee.

He said that over the weeks and months, as he tried to understand the motivation of the officer, why the charges were not dropped even after he tried to get through to the officer's superiors, he began to view the entire situation as an incident of undue harassment, and began to develop his own suspicions about the motivations of the officer and his superiors.

That began to feed additional worry, he said.

The concern was what more would it cost him in lost business if he had to use his farm tags again to complete a long distance haul.

The incident isn't completely over, but is expected to be concluded soon.

However, it doesn't end there.

Of further concern was the fact that a Pennsylvania Department of Transportation employee attended the hearing this week, the same one the producer said he attempted to contact and send information. The employee was at the hearing acting as an expert on behalf of the law enforcement officer.

That PennDOT representative called the producer a "fool" because he couldn't provide the court with anything more than a cancelled check to the owner of the cropland he rents.

The PennDOT official also told the district justice that handshake leasing agreements were not the normal business practice — a surprise to the producer, especially since he used such an agreement last year to rent state prison land.

In the farming community, such business practices are considered to be common, despite the PennDOT official's statement to the district justice.

It is true that some financial and legal experts and consultants have been advising farmers not to continue conducting business agreements without specific, detailed documentation, but there is much evidence that the farming community still relies on respect of another's word and expressed intent, not his fine print.

The PennDOT official presented an opinion that the farmer should have all his leases in writing, and that proof of that should be easily available at all times in the truck.

The PennDOT official also talked about investigating the farmer's tax records, and checking with the Department of Revenue to see if an audit would better determine if the farm in question is or is not being leased by the producer.

In the meantime, John Bell, legal counsel with the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, said that sentiment expressed by the PennDOT representative, if in fact accurate, concerned him, because it smacks of assumed guilt and forcing someone to prove their innocence instead of it being assumed, which is supposedly the higher law.

"This flies in the face of what is the law with respect to evidence and burdens of proof," Bell said. "I feel very strongly about that statement."

"... If a farmer is using a vehicle in a manner consistent with the interpretations (of PennDOT) he should not be burdened with having to prove that he is in fact authorized to operate the vehicle."

"It is the burden of the prosecution, not the farmer, to prove whether his truck is being operated illegally."

The PFB does provide its members with a brochure outlining the farm tag laws and restrictions.

For example, some local enforcement agents may be under a mistaken belief that there is some distance restriction on a farm truck.

(There actually are travel distance restrictions — of a 150-mile radius of the farm, based on the driver's license limitations and weight of vehicle. However, with a commercial driver's license appliicable to the weight of a rig with farm tags, there is no distance restriction.)

While the producer in this case could have paid the fine and continued his operation, knowing that his commercial rig was coming back into service soon enough, he said the more he thought about it, the more it angered him.

He said a recent television program reminded him of his duty as a citizen of the United States, that the constitution is to be upheld against all enemies, foreign and domestic. The constitution guarantees that all are to be assumed to be innocent until proven guilty.

However, as a pragmatic matter, it seems that it may well serve those who operate and lease farmland, as most do today, and who use farm tags on vehicles, to secure and keep with them at all times some evidence that a load of hay came from rented ground under control of the producer who holds the farm tag.

Also, it seems equally pragmatic to keep a copy of the law in the vehicle, and to make sure that an inquiring officer is provided all the facts of ownership and operational control of truck and commodity that should satisfy the conditions of the law.

According to PennDOT's community relations coordinator Ann Patterson, she couldn't comment on statements made by the agency's representative in court.

Patterson also would not comment on whether the gist of the statements made by the agency representative actually represented agency policy, or whether it is common practice for PennDOT agents to attend local hearings in support of law enforcement agents.

However, Patterson did provide what she said was a complete copy of PennDOT's advisory interpretations of the allowable uses of a vehicle with farm plates. (See sidebar story, PennDOT Provides Interpretations.)

PennDOT Provides Interpretations Of Farm Vehicle Laws

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Since Sept. 15, 1994, the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation has had revised guidelines established for use by law enforcement and judicial officials to help them interpret the state laws covering the use of farm vehicle plates.

While not addressing recent comments made by a PennDOT representative to enforcement and judicial officials that went beyond the guidelines listed here, those who use farm plates on their vehicles should be aware not only of the law, but how it is being interpreted.

In addition to the following interpretations by PennDOT of the state Vehicle Code Title 75, Section 1344, which applies to the operation of farm vehicles (bold face words were added for emphasis), there is also a toll-free telephone number farmers can use to attempt to reach PennDOT, if there are questions regarding the uses of the plates. The number is 800-932-4600.

Use Of Farm Vehicle Plates (revised)

This is issued by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation for the purpose of interpreting the provisions of Section 1344 (a) of the Vehicle

Code relative to the operation of vehicles registered under farm vehicle registrations. It is the intent of this document that the interpretations expressed herein be applied by the Department (PennDOT) and by law enforcement and judicial officials, pursuant to determinations of uses of farm registered vehicles that are permitted and prohibited under Section 1344 (a).

A. In order for a registered farm vehicle to be lawfully operated under Section 1344 (a), one of the following conditions must exist:

1. The vehicle registrant must own the farm from which the farm registered vehicle will be operated; or
2. The vehicle registrant must operate the farm from which the farm registered vehicle will be operated.

B. A registered farm vehicle shall be authorized to be operated:

1. Within any farm owned or operated by the vehicle registrant;
2. On highways between parts of one farm owned or operated by the vehicle registrant;
3. On highways between any of two or more farms owned or operated by the vehicle registrant;
4. On highways between any farm owned or occupied by the vehicle registrant and a place of business, provided that the operation of the vehicle is for the purpose of buying or selling agricultural commodities or supplies.

A registered farm vehicle may also be operated on highways between a place of business at which the commodity is sold by the vehicle registrant, an employee of the vehicle registrant, or an auctioneer, and the place of delivery, if delivery is made using the same vehicle of the registrant which transported the commodities to the place of business.

5. On highways between any farm owned or operated by the vehicle registrant and any of the following locations:

- a. a driver examination point;
- b. a vehicle inspection station;
- c. a commercial or noncommercial vehicle repair or service facility.

C. For the purpose of determining whether or not compliance with the applicable requirements of paragraph (b) (4) have been met:

1. A "place of business" shall include other farms owned or operated by persons other than the vehicle registrant; commercial businesses engaged in buying, selling or marketing agricultural commodities or supplies; and any premises for disposal of any waste or residual materials resulting from the use of agricultural supply or production of any agricultural com-

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A new state pilot program designed to provide fresh farmers market fruits and vegetables to senior citizens was announced this week by the state Department of Agriculture.

According to a news release by the PDA, the pilot program expands participation in the existing Pennsylvania Farmers Market food coupon program beyond the women, infants and children that it has been serving to now include senior citizens in the city of Chester area.

There are three farmers markets involved in the program and coupons, or "checks," are now to be made available to eligible senior citizens — aged 60 or older — who live in the city of Chester, or within the surrounding communities of Aston, Chester Township, Edystone, Marcus Hook, Parkside, Trainer, Upland, and Lower and Upper Chichester.

Angus Breeders Parade 252 Entries At Atlantic National Show

TIMONIUM, Md. — Judge Mark Richardson, Milton, Ind., selected champions from the 176 females, 56 bulls and 20 cow-calf pairs that were paraded by Angus breeders at the 1998 Atlantic National Super Roll of Victory (ROV) Angus Show. The event was held May 24 in Timonium, Md.

The title of supreme champion over all entries was presented to Whitestone Queen Elba F176 and her September 1997 heifer calf. The pair, which was shown by Whitestone Farm, Aldie, Va., and Mark Duffell, Aldie, Va., was first named the grand champion cow with embryo calf. The cow is an April 1994 daughter of Leachman Right Time, while the calf is sired by RR Regal 1459.

In the bull show, top honors were awarded to WK Online, the junior champion entry. The February 1996 son of Krugerrands Moneyline was show by Whitestone Krebs, Gordon, Neb., and WK Online Associates, Gordon, Neb.

Whitestone Treasury J187, a March 1997 son of G T S V F Treasury, captured the reserve grand champion bull title. The winning entry was exhibited by Jane Saunders, Richmond, Va. and Whitestone Farm, Aldie, Va. He was first named the late spring bull calf champion.

WK Tillie 7277 walked away with the grand champion female title for Kami Krebs, Gordon, Neb., and Express Angus Ranches, Shawnee, Okla. The February 1997 daughter of Krugerrands Moneyline first topped the early spring heifer calf division.

The reserve grand champion female honors were earned by Whitestone Miss Rita J118, the reserve early spring heifer calf champion. Clear View Farm, Louisa, Va., and Jane Saunders, Richmond, Va., exhibited the February 1997 daughter of G A R Precision 1680.

Chester Senior Citizens Eligible For Farmers Market Program

The markets that will accept the Farmers Market Nutrition program checks to purchase the fresh produce include:

- Chester Community Farmers Market — located at the Trinity United Methodist Church parking lot, Ninth and Kerlin streets in Chester, open every Thursday from noon to 4 p.m.

- Linnville Orchards Farm Market — located at 137 W. Knowlton Road in Media, it is open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

- Rockview State Correctional Institution Farm Operation — location and hours to be announced.

According to PDA, the program vouchers, also called "checks," are to be accepted only at these three markets. They are to be available in increments of $5 exchangeable only for eligible foods, not cash.

For those seniors who are members of the Chester Senior Center, the checks can be picked up at the Center, located at 721 Hayes Street in Chester.

For those seniors who are not members of the Chester Senior Center, and for those who live in the surrounding communities, checks also are to be picked up at the Center, but only on Wednesdays from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

The announcement of the pilot program was made by state Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes Jr., on behalf of state Gov. Tom Ridge.

"In Pennsylvania, we produce an abundant array of nutritious, high-quality fruits and vegetables, and we believe our seniors should have access to a healthy diet," Hayes said. "Health experts recommend five or more servings of fruits and vegetables daily for good health."

For more information on the program, call the PDA Bureau of Food Distribution at 1-800-468-2433.

Size of Business vs. Margin of Profit - Article 5

The last article looked at how farming methods can affect farm profits. This week we will focus on size of business and its impact on farm profits and profit margins.

Consider what size business you are capable of managing. As you get larger, remember you start managing more people, and you manage them differently than cows.

Getting better before getting bigger has many advantages, especially when cash flow and equity are limited. It requires less capital, it is less risky, and a smaller operation is easier to manage.

Well-managed smaller farms, with larger margins of profit per cwt. of milk, may be able to survive economic downturns better than a larger farm operating with a smaller margin of profit. Note: larger farms don't necessarily have smaller margins of profit. However, smaller margin of profit may result because of a recent expansion that involves larger debt payments. See Table 1.

Table 1 Profit Margins vs. Size (18,000 lb. of milk per cow)

Description	50-Cow Herd and Larger Margins			100-Cow Herd and Smaller Margins
	per Farm	per Cow	per Cwt.	per Farm	per Cow	per Cwt.
Cwt. milk shipped	9,000			18,000
Original profit ($30,000)	30,000	600	3.33	30,000	300	1.67
$1.00 milk price drop	9,000	180	1.00	18,000	180	1.00
Revised profit	21,000	420	2.33	12,000	120	0.67

In this example, both farms had the same original profit of $30,000. Then, milk price dropped $1.00 per cwt. The larger farm experienced a larger drop ($18,000 vs. $9,000) because it had more cwt.'s of milk to take the hit. Consequently, the larger farm ended up with less profit ($12,000 vs. $21,000). A second $1.00 drop would send the larger farm into a $6,000 loss ($12,000 - $18,000), while the smaller farm would still have $12,000 profit ($21,000 - $9,000). Conversely, if milk prices increase the larger farm would experience a greater increase in profit.

Getting better might be more profitable than expanding -- at least until the expansion loans are paid off. Situations will vary a lot from farm to farm, so push the pencil and use your own figures. The main point is consider profit margins as well as size, try not to let profit margins shrink to the point where you become extremely vulnerable to even the slightest changes in costs (i.e. feed) or returns (i.e. milk price). If you do expand, get better before getting bigger, and be sure you are capable of managing a larger operation.

Michael Zylstra awarded Holstein Association USA's Rumler Scholarship

BRATTLEBORO, Vt - Michael Zylstra of Modesto, Calif. has been awarded the 1998 Robert H. Rumler Scholarship from the Holstein Association. The California resident is pursuing a Master's in Business Administration from California Polytechnic State University in San Luis Obispo.

Zylstra was raised on the Andrew Zylstra Dairy, Inc., and despite attending Cal Poly as a full-time student, helps on the family farm during school breaks. He participates in many of the day to day activities of the farm and assumes management responsibilities when necessary.

He has done a great deal of work with waste water management, as producers in the Central Valley have been plagued with many issues, including the danger of dairy run-off contaminating the local water supply. He has been exploring many different options, and first became interested in this area when he participated in an internship at UC Davis.

Zylstra graduated Cum Laude from Cal Poly last December. He was a member of Agricultural Ambassadors and Alpha Zeta and active in the Los Lecheros Dairy Club.

He hopes to couple his dairy production background with his education in business and dairy management to market milk produced in the U.S. around the world.

American ID numbers now printed on Holstein ID Tags

BRATTLEBORO, Vt - The American ID numbering system went into effect nationwide, industry-wide, January 1, 1998. The goal is to establish a unique, lifetime number for each animal for milk recording (DHIA), breed registry, and eventually animal health.

All animals registered in the Holstein Association herdbook after January 1 have been assigned an American ID number as its unique number. The American ID number, for registered animals, is in effect their registration number. This number is reflected on certificates and pedigrees.

The Holstein ID Tags no longer have a unique serial number printed on each tag. The number has been replaced with the American ID number. Because this number can be used industry-wide to establish a unique, lifetime number for the animal, many producers are finding it useful to have the number already printed on the tags.

The Council on Dairy Cattle Breeding allocates the numbers to each organization (breed associations, NDHIA, etc.) to ensure that no two organizations are using the same block of numbers. When American ID is in place to its fullest degree, all segments of the industry will use the American ID number assigned to the animal. Currently, an animal can have many different numbers for identification, including DHIA numbers, registration numbers, USDA vaccination numbers, and herd numbers.

The industry has started with nine digits (100,000,000) to avoid duplication of any previously assigned numbers by any organization. This nine-digit number should accommodate the industry for five to eight years.

The last numbers in the American ID number are not in sequence. This is because the last digit is a "check digit" that is determined by a mathematical formula of the other eight numbers. A second series of numbers, ranging from 50,000,000 to 99,999,999, has been issued without a check digit. The Holstein Association has been issued numbers in the 120,000,000 block, which include check digits.

The Holstein Association's Alternative ID program requires two identifiers, either two ID Tags, a Tag N'Tattoo, or Tag N' Freezebrand. For more information, call the Holstein Association at 800-952-5200.

College students intern at Holstein Foundation

BRATTLEBORO, Vt - Jill Olsen of College Ward, Utah, and Brandi Thomas of North Lewisburg, Ohio have joined the Holstein Foundation as summer communications interns.

Olsen is currently a sophomore at Utah State University where she is majoring in Dairy Science with a minor in Agricultural Communications. She also has a degree in Office Technology. She is serving as president of the Utah State Dairy Science club, and is also a member of the Animal Science Club and Collegiate FFA.

Olsen grew up on her family's dairy in College Ward. She has been active in the dairy industry since a very early age, and has won numerous awards and scholarships in her junior career. She was named a 1997 Distinguished Junior Member at the National Holstein Convention in Grand Rapids, Mich. She hopes to continue working in the industry when she graduates.

Thomas is currently a junior at the Ohio State University majoring in Agricultural Communications with a minor in Animal, Dairy and Poultry Sciences. She is active in the Buckeye Dairy Club, where she served as Co-chair of the Trip Committee. After graduation, she plans a career in the ag communications field, focusing on the dairy industry.

Thomas grew up on a Holstein and Guernsey dairy farm in North Lewisburg where she milked, fed calves, did A.I. and vet work, and field work.

Olsen and Thomas will assist in preparing for the 1998 National Holstein Convention to be held in Louisville, Ky., administering junior activities, and publicity following the event. They will also be responsible for developing educational materials for junior members.

For more information about the Holstein Association or their website, visit www.holsteinusa.com or call 800-952-5200.

MADISON, Wis.—Bou-Matic, a company of DEC International, Inc. has developed a way for dairy producers to save money while making the world a quieter place to live in.

Most dairy operations use constant-speed vacuum pumps that turn out much more airflow (cfm or L/min) than is actually required for milking and for cleaning a milking system. Traditionally, one or more vacuum pumps are installed in a milking system to produce a minimum constant airflow of six cfm (170 L/min) per milking unit (teat cups and claw assembly).

Recent scientific research has determined that the amount of airflow actually used for "steady state" milking - when all milking units are attached without any squawking teat cups or air leaks - is as little as one or two cfm (30 or 60 L/min) per unit.

According to Bou-Matic Marketing Manager Joe Prazak, "Even a superb, sanitary cleaning of the milking system requires as little as two to two-and one-half cfm (60 to 70L/min) per milking unit, if the CI_P system is properly set and balanced."

Prazak said, "There are times during milking, however, when additional airflow is required, such as when attaching units or when there is a squawking liner or when a milking unit falls off. Likewise, when cleaning the milking system there are also some instances when additional airflow is needed, such as when on air injector admits atmospheric air into the milk line to form a wash slug."

As a result of research and on-farm tests, the ASAE (American Society of Agricultural Engineers) and the ISO (International Standards organization) have officially revised their standards to reflect this new scientific knowledge. With this new knowledge, it is no longer necessary to run a vacuum pump at a constant speed to produce the maximum amount of airflow that you may need for only short periods of time during milking or cleaning.

Northeast District

Jersey Show August 25

LIBERTY (Tioga Co.) — Make plans now to attend the hottest show of the summer — the 1998 Northeast District Jersey Show.

Jerseys are gaining in popularity and what better way to celebrate the progress of the breed than by showing off your best at our local show. This year's show will be held at the Troy Fairgrounds (Alparon Park) on August 25, beginning at 9:30 a.m. Michael Heath has agreed to be the judge for the day.

Entry fees are $7 for adults and $5 for youth, under 21. Entries postmarked after the deadline will be $15 each. All entries must be postmarked by August 18, 1998.

To enter, record the animal's name, date of birth, registration number, sire, dam and ownership information and latest production record on a sheet of paper. Also include the class or classes you wish to enter the animal in and if she is owned by a junior.

A total performance award based on actual protein production and class placing will also be given at the end of the competition. To be considered for the total performance award, include the latest completed 305-day record on your entry form. In the event of a tie, the judge will determine the winner.

All cattle MUST be accompanied by a health certificate signed by an accredited veterinarian that includes a statement that the animal(s) identified have been immunized against IBR, PI3 and BVD. Animals that have not been vaccinated against BVD during the previous 12 months, must receive one dose of modified live virus vaccine given at least 15 days and not more than 180 days before the show or two doses of killed vaccine, two to four weeks apart, with the last dose given at least 15 days and not more than 180 days before the show. Animals that have been vaccinated against BVD within the 12 previous months, must receive at least a single injection of modified live or killed vaccine given not less than 15 days and not more than 180 days before the show.

Interstate animals exhibited must meet the Pennsylvania requirements and must be accompanied by an Interstate Health certificate. Rabies vaccine is suggested but not required. Exhibitors may bring animals to the fairgrounds on Monday, August 24 between 7 a.m. and 9 p.m.

Due to rising expenses, we rely heavily on industry donations. All donors will be thanked publicly for their contribution. Send any donations to Paul Moyer, show chairman, RR 1, Box 88-A, Roaring Branch, PA 17765.

What Weight Whey In Milk Value?

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, July 4, 1998-A31

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Delaware — It's been our experience as milk producers that, if we sell milk from our University of Delaware herd milk through our marketing cooperative, for example at 59 percent fluid milk utilization, we will get a much higher price, than if we are subjected to a 43-percent utilization, as is the case now.

This is so, even though it is the same milk and has cost the same to produce.

Some years ago, some Delaware dairy herd's milk was sold to a processor in southern New Jersey at 85 percent fluid milk utilization. That was great, because fluid milk utilization fetches Class I prices — the highest — and non-fluid milk utilization goes for much lower Class II prices. This makes a considerable difference in dairy farm income for the same quality milk. For example, a 100-cow dairy selling 210,000 pounds of milk per month with $13.90 for Class I and $11.10 for Class II prices per 100 pounds of milk, when sold to that New Jersey dairy at 85 percent fluid milk utilization, the monthly income would be:

85% of 210,000 lbs. milk x $13.90/cwt = $24,811.50

+ 15% of 210,000 x 11.10 = $3,496.50

totaling = $28,308,000

Later, when we all became members of the market-wide pool and a marketing cooperative, the fluid milk utilization was only 43 percent. The farm income changed drastically downward, even at the same amount and quality of milk per month:

43% of 210,000 lb. milk x $13.90/cwt = $12,551.70

totaling = $25,838.40

The loss per month was $2,469.60! Why? One reason is that market-wide, the dairy industry in this region seems to be unable to achieve a good level of fluid milk consumption, despite the great milk-mustache and other dairy promotions. Ads for soda and other soft-drinks continue to be more effective.

Another reason is that the Class II price is unfair to milk producers. Anyone in the cheese making and selling business has to concede that the profit potential for cheese is much greater than for fluid milk.

In the grocery store, special cheeses, for example, such as Brie, Gorgonzola, Pecorino or Emmental are all quite popular and not necessarily imported.

Look at the price/pound labels — some are as high as $12/pound. Then figure out what that price means per 100 pounds of milk, because 10 pounds of milk make an average of 1 pound of cheese. At $12-per-pound, the cheese price offers a nice return of $120 per 100 pounds of milk. This is far from the $13.90/100 pounds milk producers receive for fluid milk, and even farther removed from the $11.10 producers receive for selling their milk for cheese making at Class II price.

Why? In part it's because many cheese makers throw out the whey — 9 pounds are left out of 10 pounds of milk that is used to make 1 pound of cheese. Many do not know what to do with whey, or it is too expensive to do anything other than to give it back to the farmer as feed for pigs or cows.

In other countries, this whey "problem" has been solved often elegantly and profitably, especially in countries that are poor and have limited resources, such as in parts of mountainous Norway, Greece and Italy. Norwegian farmers and dairy processors routinely use whey to produce their national favorite — Gjetost brown cheese — a cheese almost unknown in the United States outside Norwegian communities. In Greece, farmers make the delicious Mizithra and Manouri cheeses from whey. These cheeses are totally unknown to non-Greek Americans, yet they are much tastier than U.S.-made cream cheese. Of course, Italians love and routinely make Ricotta from whey, even here in the United States, although it's not labeled or understood as a whey cheese, and is different from real cheeses made from precipitating milk casein.

The commercial uses of the valuable nutrients in whey are many, including lactose sugar in pharmaceutical and bakery products and whole dry whey to enrich bread with protein and minerals. Some soft-drink companies have used whey in carbonated beverages.

So, is whey an asset or a liability? It is high time that we rethink the Class I and Class II designations and prices for producers of milk from cows, goats, sheep and even water buffaloes. Give them the deserved credit for the much more profitable use of milk in cheese making and the whey-product market than for fluid milk consumption. Whey is a real but much neglected and underappreciated asset.

Finally, in the current debate about restructuring milk marketing orders and prices, let's rethink the fairness of Class I and Class II prices to our producers in relation to what the end-product retail prices are. We can argue strongly for a much higher price for cheese making Class II milk than for fluid milk Class I, because of the much greater profit margin in cheese and whey-product markets.

U. Of D. Promotes Four

NEWARK, Del. — The College of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Delaware (UD) announced the promotions of four individuals in recognition of their contributions to the college.

Susan S. Barton, cooperative extension specialist for horticulture, was promoted to extension specialist IV.

Teciemariam Weldekidan, department of plant and soil sciences, was promoted to associate scientist. Phaedra Tavlirides-Hontz, department of animal and food sciences, was promoted to research associate I.

Tracy L. Wooten, extension associate for vegetable crops at the Research and Education Center, was promoted to extension associate III.

"These promotions are a formal recognition of the professional contributions made by each of these individuals," said John C. Nye, dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources. "I am pleased that we are able to acknowledge their hard work and dedication."

A graduate of UD, Barton joined extension and the plant and soil sciences department in 1985 after receiving a master's degree in horticulture from North Carolina State University. Barton is a nationally recognized expert in the area of garden center management and merchandising. Current projects include work with the Delaware Department of Transportation and the Delaware Center for Horticulture on a roadside vegetation project.

Weldekidan received an undergraduate degree in plant science from Addis Ababa University in Ethiopia and completed a master's in plant pathology at UD in 1989. He is a member of a research team that develops new corn inbred lines with increased yield potential, disease and insect resistance, and drought tolerance. Weldekidan works with undergraduates and high school students during the summer to encourage interest in plant breeding as a career.

Tavlirides-Hontz joined the staff in 1995 after earning a degree in animal science at UD. She researches the safety and efficacy of poultry vaccines for biologic companies throughout the country. Providing this service establishes the university as a trusted source of unbiased information, benefiting both poultry farmers and biologics companies.

Wooten completed both her undergraduate and graduate work in plant science at UD. She plays an active role in commercial vegetable production in Delaware, joining the Sussex County Extension office in 1988. She is the editor of the "Weekly Crop Update," a newsletter for area growers that focuses on topics related to vegetable and agronomic crops. Wooten is president of the UD Agricultural Alumni Association.

seven states have been selected to participate during the first six-month period. Other states that have counties participating include: California, Minnesota, New York, Texas, Vermont, and Wisconsin. Selection was based on those counties and states that have a high dairy concentration. Funding has been approved for a three-year program so hopefully other counties in Pennsylvania can be included after this initial round.

If you receive a letter from Risk Management/USDA, please take a few minutes and read it carefully! It will provide details about this program along with instructions on how you sign up to participate. From the time you receive the letter, you will have approximately two weeks to return the registration form. If you have questions about the information in the letter, do not hesitate to contact your local Penn State Extension office.

If a producer chooses to participate, they will need to attend a four-hour training program in late August or early September where the final details of the program will be explained. This program will be limited to 100 producers per county.

Just what is the DOPP? The Dairy Options Pilot Program allows USDA to help share the cost of brokerage fees and option premiums that you would purchase to set a floor price for your milk. This allows producers to gain some education and experience in using options without spending much money. During the six-month period, if your county is selected to participate, you may purchase option contracts on up to 600,000 pounds of production. USDA will then pay 80 percent of the premium cost for the option and $30 of brokerage fees for each transaction. The minimum amount that needs to be contracted during the six months of the program is only 100,000 pounds. This allows both large and small producers to participate in the program.

What is an option, you ask? A BFP milk option allows the holder (producer) the right to sell a BFP contract at a guaranteed minimum floor price while still providing for upside potential, should the market move upward unexpectedly. This type of option is referred to as a "Put" and is used to protect you from falling prices. An easy way to think of options is that they are similar to insurance. The better the policy, the more it costs. An option for $13 BFP milk will cost more per cwt. than an option for $11.75. What if the BFP is above my option price when the contract ends? If this happens, then your contract expires and you are fortunate to receive the higher cash market price. Similarly, if you have car insurance and do not have an accident, your policy expires without you collecting any money.

What price options can I purchase with this program? Options are available in 25-cent increments above and below the current BFP or strike price for a given month. You will be allowed to purchase options that are at least 10 cents below the current BFP strike price. For example, if the August BFP is $13.54, then you may purchase options from $11.50 to $13.35. This would then provide a floor price on the amount of milk in the option contract.

How do I initiate an option contract? Once producers have completed their training session in August or September, they will be given a list of brokers who are approved to help you work with BFP options. You can then decide what portion of production for which you'd like to purchase an option. No more than 200,000 pounds may be hedged in any one month. Each option contract must be held for a minimum of two months. For example, if it is September and you want to take a Put option under this program, you will need to work with December '98 or early '99 contracts.

Option contracts come in different sizes depending on which trading exchange you work with. BFP contracts are traded daily on the Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange in New York and at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange in Chicago. Contracts on the Coffee Exchange are in 100,000-pound increments while contract sizes at the Mercantile Exchange are 50,000 pounds and 200,000 pounds.

If I participate in this program, does it change the way I get paid from my milk company or cooperative? Absolutely not. Your milk is still marketed as always and your milk check from your milk buyer will not change. Should the futures BFP price drop below your option floor price, you would receive money from your option account. That money combined with your cash price would equal your floor price.

Both trading exchanges have excellent educational material, available at no cost, that help to explain BFP futures and options trading. Information can be obtained from the Chicago Mercantile Exchange by calling (312)

930-1000, or from the Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange at (212) 742-6100. The Coffee exchange also has a free book available entitled: From Price Taker to Price Maker. This easy to read book discusses BFP hedging and provides numerous examples for you to follow.

If you are one of the six selected counties, be watching your mail for DOPP details. Any producers in PA who have questions on this program are encouraged to contact their county Extension office for additional information. Additional contact persons would be Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension Office (717) 394-6851, and Larry Swartz or Larry Yager, Adams County Extension Office (717) 334-6271.

Cows, Carrots And Heat Stress

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — There's an old saying: "What's good for horses is good for cows, and maybe even humans."

That is one reason oats is a popular feed, although for cows, the price doesn't fit into the least-cost ration formulation.

Carrots is another example. Horses love them and a regular feeding of carrots makes their haircoat glossy. But not too many dairy farmers feed carrots to their cows, not even to their prize cows. Cost and labor in handling small carrots is one reason.

In this country we do not feed cows the bigger root vegetables, such as rutabagas, mangles or cowbeets, as farmers still do in Europe. Instead, we have turned to the chemical-pharmaceutical industry for cheaper extracts with (we hope)—the same nutritional benefits. Instead of feeding carrots, we add a carotene supplement to the feed ration. However, there are several different carotenes and, we hope, the beta-carotene is the right one.

Actually, carotenes have some unique metabolic properties beyond the empirical benefit of glossy haircoats. These properties are called antioxidant. In research with embryos of cows and mice, it has been found that antioxidants protect them against deleterious effects from the elevated temperatures that are experienced on hot summer days. In new research at the University of Florida (appropriately), this reputation of antioxidants was tested to possibly reduce bovine embryo losses.

Soon we may have Florida-type heat here too, so this research offers interesting possibilities for application. Heat stress generally reduces conception or pregnancy rates in dairy cows. It has been determined that in Florida the average pregnancy rates of 45 percent in winter are drastically reduced to less than 10 percent during the hottest summer months. Also, heat stress reduces the expression and length of estrus behavior, thus fewer cows are detected in estrus. Consequently, fewer cows are bred by artificial insemination than should be, resulting in fewer pregnancies, longer calving intervals and longer lactations with less milk production per day.

To alleviate the bad effects of heat stress, Florida has pioneered ways to cool cows, such as erecting cloth covers to shade cows in feeding and holding areas and, even more effective, a combination of overhead sprinklers and fans for evaporative cooling. The University of Delaware dairy herd has benefited from these cooling means also, even though our cows are not subjected to that much Florida-like heat. A number of farm magazines have written on this topic at this time, because these methods pay off outside of Florida, too.

However, even with the best cooling systems, studies comparing calving intervals for winter vs. summer breeding in Florida have shown that the intervals are different and still too long for summer breeding.

A new strategy being tested is timed artificial breeding, or timed

A.I. This involves the use of sex hormone injections into cows to induce ovulation at a precise, predictable time a few days later. Thus, there is no more need to worry about observing estrus in cows or missing any.

The precise estrus time after hormone injections means that a greater efficiency in inseminating cows is achievable. At least this is the hypothesis of the new Florida research. The study was conducted at two commercial dairy farms, one in southern and one in northern Florida over a 12-month period with 700 Holstein cows. They had the benefit of overhead sprinkler cooling. Added to their complete ration were 400 milligrams beta-carotene per day for the experimental cows, at least 15 days before breeding. These cows

How About A Pasteurized, Whole Egg?

According to one industry representative, scientists have long recognized the benefits of egg pasteurization — for liquid packaging of eggs. But this process promises to deliver a whole egg ready to be poached or turned into part of a sunny-side breakfast.

"Scientists have long recognized the broad-form, proven, safety benefits of pasteurization," said L. John Davidson, president of the Davidson Group Shell Egg Corporation Pasteurized Eggs, L.P., Laconia, N.H. Davidson, who spoke at the demonstration, indicated that with this technology, diseases, especially forms of Salmonella Enteritidis (SE) from raw, uncooked eggs will become "a collector's item."

Here's how the process works.

Through a series of conveyor "batches," eggs are exposed to a carefully monitored, precision-timed series of warm water baths. The water quality is maintained with low bacteria counts through use of FDA-approved anti-bacterial agents. The temperatures provide enough heating to kill salmonella inside the eggs, including the yokes, without bringing them to the consistency of hard-boiled eggs.

Scientists have known for a long time that SE is particularly sensitive to temperature. Temperatures do not have to reach water's boiling point to kill SE bacteria.

After immersion in the warm water baths, which are pumped with air to keep the temperature consistent throughout the bath, the clean shells are chilled before exit from the pasteurizer and provided with a special sealant. The sealant reduces the risk of recontamination and allows extended storage.

The machine costs $1.5 million and can process 15 million dozen eggs annually per shift. According to Dennis C. Ankeny, vice president of Food Processing Systems, the system can process 175 cases per hour with 30 dozen eggs to the case. Seven hundred cases of USDA large Grade A eggs were obtained from Nearby Egg in Jefferson for last week's demonstration.

According to Ankeny, the plant in Greenfield contains 34,000 square feet of space and employs 26.

At the demonstration, Davidson noted there were about 21,000 dozen eggs out on the floor to process.

Additional cost to consumers will be about 4 cents per egg, said Davidson. Added cost to the foodservice user is projected at 2.5 cents per egg.

There is no marked difference in eggs that are raw and that are pasteurized. The company noted that the white, or albumin, on the pasteurized egg will appear better formed and have a mild "fogginess" when fried (this, because the "hardboiling" process has been sped up by the bath immersion).

In 1994, the company requested FDA approval of the pasteurization technology. In May of that year, the FDA set a standard of a 5-logarithmic reduction of a known count of Salmonella to quality for the use of the term "pasteurized." In May of 1995, the FDA confirmed that the company qualified for the standard. FDA approval allows the company to advertise its eggs to be 99.9999 percent Salmonella-free.

At the same time, the USDA agreed to create a new shield to be displayed on each egg and each egg carton. The USDA shield states each egg is "certified pasteurized," formalized in September 1997.

Patent claims for the process and technology for pasteurizing shell eggs have been issued to the company, according to a release.

According to Louis Polster, Alexandria, Va., an inventor of some of the technology, each bath holds about 3,000 gallons of water. The temperature anywhere in the bath, he said, is consistent to 0.1 degree. There are about 2.4 million BTUs accessible for use in pasteurization. Polster will own about 5-6 patents by the time process is fine-tuned, he noted.

The first machine to pasteurize eggs has been operational since November 1997 and took about four years to design and build, noted Davidson. This month, according to the company, the current design will be modified to accommodate chilling the eggs at the end of the pasteurization process to an internal egg temperature of 41 degrees prior to exit, to accommodate new regulations under consideration.

The U.S. egg market is 6 billion dozen or approximately $6.1 billion market at retail. Seventy percent or $4.3 billion are shell eggs and the remainder, at $1.8 billion, are liquid eggs.

Equipment to pasteurize liquid eggs was developed in the 1960s.

SE is a leading cause of food-borne illness in the U.S. The FDA's Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition reports between 24 and 81 million cases of foodborne illnesses occur each year in the United States. Approximately 20 percent of food poisoning results from Salmonella in chicken and eggs. Up to 1 billion eggs consumed each year may contain some Salmonella contamination.

Through a series of conveyor "batches," eggs are exposed to a carefully monitored, precision-timed series of warm water baths. The water quality is maintained with low bacteria counts through use of FDA-approved anti-bacterial agents. The temperatures provide enough heating to kill salmonella inside the eggs, including the yokes, without bringing them to the consistency of hard-boiled eggs.

People who contract SE from eggs can suffer from Salmonellosis. From six hours to three days after ingestion, Salmonella bacteria causes severe diarrhea, abdominal cramps, low-grade fever, nausea, and vomiting. Symptoms can last up to two weeks.

According to U.S. health estimates, about one egg in 20,000 is believed to be contaminated with SE, and some believe the figure could be higher. The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., believe that illnesses from SE contamination cost industries about $2 billion per year in worker sickness, according to Davidson. SE is particularly dangerous for the very young, very old, and the immunosuppressed.

Davidson and the company believe that more "bugs" are becoming "smarter, more resilient, and there are different strains of them," he said. "This process kills them all."

"Scientists have long recognized the broad-form, proven, safety benefits of pasteurization," said L. John Davidson, president of the Davidson Group Shell Egg Corporation Pasteurized Eggs, L.P., Laconia, N.H. Davidson shows the batches of eggs before they are placed in the baths.

The USDA agreed to create a new shield to be displayed on each egg and each egg carton. The USDA shield states each egg is "certified pasteurized."

ABA Schedules Breeders' Forums

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — The Ayrshire Breeders' Association will be holding breeders' forums at four different locations this year.

The forums are held to inform Ayrshire breeders and enthusiasts of association news and policies. They are also a great way for Ayrshire breeders to unite to voice their ideas and concerns in an atmosphere of camaraderie and friendship.

The first breeders' forum, hosted by Roger Ridley in Shapleigh, Maine, at the New England Field Day, will take place on July 25, at 10:30 a.m. The president of the New England Ayrshire Club, Doug Shores, will be conducting the meeting.

On Sept. 19, the second Ayrshire Breeders' Forum will be held at Plum Bottom Farm, owned by John Reed Rodgers of Bellevue, Pennsylvania. The meeting, starting at 10:57 a.m. and ending at noon, will be conducted by David Patrick.

World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wisconsin, will be the location for the third breeders' forum on Wednesday, Sept. 30, at 5:30 p.m. The Ayrshire Breeders' Association Marketing/Promotion Coordinator James McConnell will serve as the leader of the meeting.

The fourth and final breeders' forum will be Monday, Nov. 9, at 1 p.m. during the North American International Livestock Exposition in Louisville, Kentucky. Barbara Spoon will be conducting the meeting in the west wing of the exposition center.

If you have any questions about these forums, please contact the Ayrshire Breeders' Association.

The Ayrshire Breeder's Association is the national organization for the registration and promotion of Ayrshire cattle and is headquartered in Brattleboro, Vermont.

also were given 8 micrograms GnRH gonadotropin about 50 days after calving, plus 25 milligram prostaglandin 7 days later, plus 8 microgram GnRH gonadotropin 2 days after that. On the following day, timed A.I. proceeded — in all, 10 days after the initial hormone injection.

The results published in the "Journal of Dairy Science" (Feb. 1998, pp. 390-402), were that timed A.I. increased pregnancy rates significantly, to almost normal rates, even during hot summer months. In addition, cows supplemented with carotene for more than 90 days had higher pregnancy rates and much-increased daily milk production.

It was concluded that timed A.I. can reduce the deleterious effects of heat stress on reproductive function of dairy cows. Also, supplementation with beta-carotene not only helped improve fertility in heat-stressed dairy cattle but caused a substantial increase in milk yield as well, apparently by the antioxidant promoting lactation.

It would seem that the old saying about horses and cows still holds true, which should result in more net income for the embattled dairy farmer.

These delicious recipes can be whipped up in a flash—or made the night before to serve to family and guests.

Big Hit Snack Tips

• When packing the cooler for the ballpark or picnic, remember not to overstock the cooler. Air needs to circulate inside to keep items properly cool.

• Be sure to use plenty of ice, and pack your items directly on the ice.

• For a fun kid's drink, place regular drink boxes into the freezer, they can be served partially frozen for a slushy drink or simply used to keep drinks colder longer. They're great for picnics, lunches or baseball games!

• Pimientos are best known as the center of a stuffed olive. Today, people are discovering pimientos as a new way to add extraordinary color to ordinary side dishes like corn, green beans, salads—even scrambled eggs.

• For a fun treat, try dipping crackers halfway into melted chocolate; coat with sprinkles, coconut or chopped candies. Or spread snack crackers with creamy peanut butter; top with miniature marshmallows, chocolate chips and colored sprinkles.

• Pepperoni is a fun and tasty food ingredient that adds flavor and spice to ordinary dishes. New turkey pepperoni offers the same spicy pepperoni flavor, with 70% less fat. Turkey pepperoni can easily be substituted in any recipe with pepperoni.

• Blend softened cream cheese and powdered sugar; spread on crackers and top with fresh fruit pieces.

• Stir pimientos and chopped pepperoni into prepared guacamole. Serve as a dip with crackers.

• Top a thin slice of roast beef with a slice of Swiss cheese. Roll up and cut into 1/4 inch slices. Place on crackers and top with prepared BBQ sauce.

• Blend cream cheese, prepared pesto and pimientos. Serve as a spread.

• Top crackers with chopped ham, pepperoni and Swiss cheese drizzled with Italian salad dressing for an Italian submarine sandwich.

Milk Case Management Improves Sales

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — With 80 percent of all milk sales to consumers made in supermarkets, dairy farmers can't afford for supermarkets to lose milk sales due to poor management of the dairy case.

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. (ADADC), just completed a survey of the area's 700 largest supermarket dairy cases and identified the leading cause of lost milk sales as shortage of stock, lack of product variety, and insufficient rotation schedules.

Although it is called "the dairy case," lots of non-dairy items like margarine, juice, fresh pasta, tortillas, and Jell-O are merchandised in dairy cases, leaving less space for retailers to offer consumers a full line of dairy products. Since 1992, ADADC has reset 541 dairy cases, resulting in an additional 1,557 tankerloads of milk sold.

This year, ADADC has teamed up with the national leader in dairy case improvements, the Partnering Group Inc., to look at ways to improve dairy cases at 64 Edwards stores located throughout the Metro New York area and 84 Giants/Martins stores located in southeastern Pennsylvania.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Knee-high by the Fourth of July.

"We have a question," queried a trio of neighborhood friends who routinely take their exercise power walks on the stretch of township road that loops through the middle of the farm.

"That saying about corn being knee-high by the Fourth of July?" one continued.

"Whose knee?"

We all chuckled together—and I confessed to having no clue whose knee the saying referred to. But pondering their teasing later brought to mind a memory.

July Fourth one year ago, corn wasn't knee high to anything. Except maybe a grasshopper. We eyed the drying, stunted fields of corn with growing dread. The rains hadn't come.

And, didn't, as we all remember. And area farmers with livestock and/or poultry to feed and bed have paid the price in scrounging for costly replacements.

What a difference a year makes. This Independence Day celebration finds us not checking for cactus growing in the back-forty, but scanning to see of the racket in our backyard rainforest is a group of monkeys taking over the maples. Which turned out to be just the resident family of fat, irate squirrels grumbling at Butch the Tiger Cat, who has recently claimed dibs on the bird feeder for his cat-naps.

As we celebrate our nation's birthday this weekend—a nation founded, defended and won pretty much by a rag-tag army of untrained farmers—there is much for which we can be thankful. Three things especially come to my mind on this 1998 national birthday celebration.

Freedom. Family. Frequent rains.

And who but a farmer would delight in a rainy holiday weekend?

A cornfield grows directly across the road from the farmhouse-office door. It was our first planted when the early May monsoons stopped and the first wave of Sahara heat swept across southern York County.

Few things delight farmers more than watching things grow. But the growth of that field was ploddingly slow at first, it's initial race out of the seed and up into springtime stymied by goofy weather. Then, once germinated and poking through the soil, the early growth looked sort of a pale, yellowish color. Remember the chilly nights in late May when we tossed another blanket on the beds?

Recent greenhouse conditions and the booster feeding of liquid nitrogen fertilizer have since coaxed the cornstalks into a spiraling growth that is an absolute delight to watch. The field across the road is shooting corn growth up on a couple of inches a day has obliterated the view of our neighbors on the ridge above the farm.

And while our early summer combination of abundant moisture, plentiful heat and choking humidity are the most miserable kind of weather to us people-types, the crops that sustain our livelihood thrive in those conditions. No, it's not favorable for cows or pigs or chickens but absolutely loved by corn, soybeans, and hay.

So, everytime I begin moaning about the bouts of heat and humidity, I try to jolt my conscience with memory-minders about last year's lack of green.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Gloucester County 4-H Fair

For the first time, the Gloucester County 4-H Fair will run from Thursday, July 23 through Sunday, July 26.

For all four days, the Gloucester County 4-H Fairgrounds in Mullica Hill will become a beehive of activity. Route #77 will swarm with a steady stream of vehicles bringing more than 900 4-H'ers and their exhibits to show off to more than 12,000 Fair visitors. The fair hours will be Thursday, July 23, from 4 p.m. - 9:30 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, July 24 and 25, from 9 a.m. - 9 p.m.; and Sunday, July 26, from 9 a.m. - 6 p.m.

For the four days of the annu-

Because everything—everything—this summer is green.

Green is poking out of the cracks in the pavement around the buildings; we may have to mow the driveways. It's climbing over the raspberries, hanging over pond banks, threatening to obliterate the mailbox. Green is growing on the mid-pond gooseneck, sending roots right down into the pond for moisture.

Green is happily thriving in the rainspout high overhead at the edge of our house roof. Green is poking out of every nook and cranny, every niche, every bare spot where an upstart weed or grassy patch can take root.

And it is beautiful.

At least for this year, we have an idea whose knee the corn will reach this Fourth of July weekend.

The Jolly Green Giant's.

al Gloucester County 4-H, the animal barns will burst with rabbits, horses, pigs, goats, steers and cows, while the exhibit barn will show visitors 4-H woodworking, needlework, quilts, crafts, vegetables and flowers. Exhibiting marks the culmination of a full year of work for 4-H members.

An exciting schedule of events over the four days will provide something for every age group. In addition to 4-H exhibits and shows, the fair will also host both the New Jersey Peach Festival and the Gloucester County Tomato Expo, both of which will provide exhibits, tasting, and contests throughout the four days.

On Thursday, horse, and swine shows will be followed by the naming of the Gloucester County 4-H Ambassador Team and a performance by the Pitman Hobo Band at 8 p.m. Friday's event will include sheep, rabbit and small animal shows, a Western Horse Show, a livestock auction, and the Miss Peach Pageant Children can also enjoy a magic show and compete in a Kiddie Tractor Pull.

The Gangi dancers performance will be followed by country dance lessons. Saturday is "Kids Day." Activities for kids start with a Diaper Derby and Baby Parade followed by Turle Races and a Frog Jumping Contest. On stage, Sci Fi Robot present a children's program and 4-H Leader John Means will present a Rock-N Reptile Show. The entire family can enjoy an English Horse Show and a Draft Horse Pull and storage, the Gloucester City Old Time String Band.

Sunday will feature a Mini Horse Show, a dairy goat show and a dog show and for good eating something new, a pig roast.

Prize 4-H market lambs and hogs will be auctioned off Friday evening, July 24 at 7:30 p.m. at the 4-H Fair.

Arrangements will be made to have your purchased animal taken to the slaughter house and packaged for your freezer, roasts, chops, bacon, even scrapple. The 4-H members who raise these animals use the money to purchase new animals for next year. Many set aside any profit they receive toward their future educational goals.

Is your preference chicken, seafood or pork? On Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 4 p.m. - 7:30 p.m., a special food will be the feature for dinner. On Thursday, you will choose from steamed clams, clams on the half shell, shrimp or barbecue ribs or all of them! Each item is priced separately. Freshly picked sweet corn, rolls, and iced tea will complete this ala carte menu.

On Friday and Saturday enjoy 4-H's delicious chicken barbecue dinner. This includes sweet corn, fresh Jersey tomatoes, rolls, iced tea, and potato chips. On Sunday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. There will be a pig roast.

At 6 p.m. on Friday, Miss Peach for 1998 Will take the crown and the Governor's trophy will be presented for the finest quality peaches.

Attracting Butterflies To Your Backyard Wildlife

Join Penn State Extension and York County Parks for a free lecture on establishing butterfly habitat. The program is Tuesday, July 21 at 6:30 p.m. at Richard M. Nixon County Park, Jacobus. Children over 10 years of age can attend a free walking tour at 2 p.m. the same day. Butterfly lecturer, Rick Mikula will lead each program. To pre-register, call 717-428-1961.

Hershey Garden's newly-constructed butterfly house offers a new way for individuals to enjoy butterflies.

In early July, brightly colored butterflies are regular guests in a backyard. The National Wildlife Federation recommends attracting butterflies using plants that serve the needs of all their life stages. Butterflies need a place to lay eggs, food plants for the larvae (caterpillar), a place to form a chrysalis, and nectar sources for the adult. For example, to attract Zebra swallowtails, plant several paw-paw trees.

Most adult butterflies live 20-40 days. Some, however, are believed to live no longer than three to four days, while others such as overwintering monarchs, may live six months.

Adult butterflies searching for nectar look for red, yellow, orange, pink or purple blossoms. They prefer flat topped or clustered blossoms with short flower tubes. This allows the butterflies to reach the nectar with their proboscis. Nectar producing plants should be grown in open, sunny areas. Adults rarely feed on plants in the shade.

Some caterpillars are picky eaters, and rely on only one or two species of plants. The caterpillar of the giant swallowtail butterfly feed on just one native plant food—the northern prickly ash. Others, such as the red-spotted purple will feed on a variety of deciduous trees.

Here is a list of the plants that can attract butterflies: Lilac, Red Clover, Phlox, Yarrow, Honesty, Aubretia, Zinnia, Cosmos, Butterfly bush, Joe-Pye weed, Tickseed Sunflowers, Goldenrods, Asters, Butterfly weed, Liatris, Thistles, Ceanothus species, Dogbanes and Meadowsweet.

Butterfly Facts:

- Over 700 species of butterflies are found in North America but very few are agricultural pests.

- Adult butterflies range in size from the half-inch pigmy blue found in Southern California, to the giant female

Queen Alexandra's birdwing of New Guinea, which measures about 10 inches from wing tip to wing tip

- Butterfly tarsi or "feet" possess a sense similar to taste: contact with sweet liquids such as nectar causes the proboscis to uncoil.

- Millions of shinglelike, overlapping scales give butterfly wings their colors and patterns. Metallic, iridescent hues come from faceted scales that refract light; solid colors from pigment scales.

- During the time from hatching to pupating (forming the pupa or chrysalis), the caterpillar may increase its body size more than 30,000 times.

- The chrysalises or pupae of many common gossamer wings—a group of butterflies which includes the blues, hairstreaks and elfins—are capable of producing weak sounds. By flexing and rubbing together body segment membranes, sounds are generated which may frighten off small predators and parasites.

- Butterfly gardening enthusiasts in the Susquehanna Valley have formed a chapter of the North American Butterfly Association. This non-profit organization was formed to educate the public about the joys of butterfly observation, conservation and gardening. The chapter meets once a month. Amazing Maize Maze

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The American Maze Company has been getting people lost since 1993, and, for the summer of 1998, intends to get 175,000 people lost in six giant mazes cut into cornfields in five states as it affords the family farm another source of income as an agritainment.

The Amazing Maize Maze™ craze, family fun on the family farm, is sweeping the eastern seaboard with more than 25 acres of seven-foot-high corn under cultivation for the express purpose of creating giant mazes.

Student Uses Artistic Talent To Raise Funds For FFA

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff
TERRE HILL (Lancaster Co.)

— Sights are set on a pair of mallards to help bring in the money — $25,000, to be exact.

How well those mallards set the stage will be evident on Monday, July 20. That's the date for the annual Fore FFA Golf Tournament, which will be held at both Foxchase Golf Course and Hawk Valley Golf Club this year to accommodate golfers.

After a day of golfing for FFA's benefit, an awards dinner and auction will be held in the hopes of raising funds for the state FFA Foundation.

The item expected to generate the most interest showcases the talents of Grassland Chapter FFA member Greg Yoder.

His original painting of "Weedy Retreat Mallards" will go to the highest bidder.

For those who can't outbid the bidder, time-limited edition prints, remarque, and artists' proof of the original painting will be sold.

A time-limited edition means that the edition size will be determined by the number of prints ordered by Sept. 1. Each print is numbered with the assigned number being in the order of the purchase. The lower numbers are worth more as collectors' prints.

Artist proofs or APs are the first 20 prints that come off the press and are numbered in a series.

A remarque is a special AP where the artist, in this case Greg, will do a colored pencil sketch on the margin of the print, thus making it one of a kind and adding additional value to the piece.

Each FFA chapter donates an article for the auction. Some of the other items to go over the auction block include a picnic table, Winross and Ertl trucks, water garden plants, handmade and hand painted bird houses, sporting goods, a wooden bread box, a pump and trough planter, a child's patio set, child's wicker love seat and table set, a handmade cedar chest, sports tickets, golf apparel, Joe Paterno autographed football, plants, FFA collectibles (tractors, trucks, and corks) art prints, and other items.

Orders are being taken now for a signed numbered print of Yoder's "Weedy Retreat Mallards," which costs $70. An artist's proof is $100, and a remarque is $140. Print features include museum quality paper and matting. Prints can be purchased through mailorder by sending the appropriate amount plus $7.50 for shipping and handling and 6 percent sales tax for Pennsylvania residents. Double-matted and framed editions cost an additional $70.

Half of the proceeds for the prints will go toward the State FFA Foundation and the other half will help Greg pay his way through art college.

Greg is the son of Glen and Kirsten Yoder. Growing up, Greg, at an early age, became fascinated with the wildlife living on the acreage surrounding the family's home on the outskirts of Terre Hill. It seemed natural to him to sketch the wildlife that lived in the woodland on their property.

Although Greg always enjoyed artwork, it wasn't until he was in seventh grade that he knew he wanted to make art his career. He began using both a sketchbook and

In addition to being an accomplished artist, Greg Yoder has received awards for his work in preserving and improving wetland habitat. His FFA advisor Bob Lauffer said that FFA's mission is to make a positive difference in the lives of students by developing their potential for premiere leadership, personal growth, and career success through agriculture education. Lauffer recognized Greg's potential and encouraged him to combine his interest in wildlife and art.

a camera to capture wildlife and waterfowl in their natural habitat. He also started working on improving the wetland habitat around their home.

Twice, in 1995 and in 1997, Greg entered the Pennsylvania Junior Duck Stamp Competition, and his artwork was selected best of show among all age groups in the state.

"Greg excels in academics and could do well in any field he selected," said Bob Lauffer, ag science instructor at Garden Spot High School. "Greg is not only talented, but he is really hardworking, budgets his time well, and is good at encouraging younger FFA members."

Like many students, Greg did not join FFA in his freshman year because he didn't realize that he could combine those classes with college preparatory studies.

Lauffer became aware of Greg's work in creating a natural habitat for wildlife and convinced him to combine his wildlife interest with ag science studies.

Greg joined Garden Spot High School's Grassland Chapter FFA. He has excelled in many competitions. He won the State FFA Aquatic Resources Career Development Event in 1996 and placed second in the state in the FFA Wildlife CDE in 1997. For the past three years, Greg has helped his team win first place in the Lancaster County Envirothon. He was also named the state winner in both environmental science and wildlife competitions.

Greg was the statewide winner of the Pennsylvania Game Commission Wildlife Project Record Book Contest for his work in improving the wetlands near his home.

In June, Greg was named the Lancaster County FFA Star in specialty agriculture and he received the Keystone FFA Degree.

Before he heads off to Rochester Institute of Technology in the fall, Greg will be featured artist in residence at the State College Arts Festival, July 9-12.

Greg plans to focus his art training on becoming a book illustrator.

For more information about the golf tournament, the auction, or the prints, contact the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation, P.O. Box 10493, Calder Square, State College, PA 16805. Phone (814) 353-9230.

"Weedy Retreat Mallards," an original painting by FFA member Greg Yoder will go to the highest bidder at the auction held following the annual Fore FFA Golf Tournament. Limited edition prints of the painting are also available through special orders. One half of the proceeds from the sale of the limited edition print will support the activities of the State FFA. An investment in this FFA project is an investment in the future of our most valuable resource — youth.

QUESTION — A reader from Finger Lakes, N.Y., would like a recipe to can together sliced onions and green bell peppers (not pickled). Also, she has heard that hot peppers can be stored in an unsealed jar on the counter covered with oil to use as needed and then use the flavored oil afterwards. Can anyone verify that the hot peppers will not spoil?

QUESTION — A New York reader would like recipes to make condiments (ketchup, mustard, relish, etc.) and sauces such as steak, barbecue, and chili sauces.

QUESTION — A reader would like to know how to make your own baking powder, cake flour, etc.

QUESTION — Cindy Barta, N. Jackson, Ohio, writes that she made quince jelly last fall. It was her first attempt at making jelly. Some of the jelly turned out fine and jelled nicely. But one batch did not gel. She had read that quince has natural pectin and did not use any pectin in the recipe, which did not call for any. She would appreciate any help or recipe that will make this type of jelly jel.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

July 4th makes me think of hot summer days. But, it does not need to be the fourth for me to get hot in my garden. The yellow bush beans have an abundant crop this year and I've been giving away Swiss Chard and red beets. Even the Bibb lettuce has formed more heads than we can eat.

When the three grandchildren were here for several hours, they swooped down on the yellow raspberries like a flock of birds. These berries are the sweetest that you could ever taste.

They begged me to play hide and seek with them. Now there are not many places to hide at our house but the boys managed to fool me into walking around the house twice before I found them. Then we played ball and even got my husband to help a little. The pictures that they drew are up on the refrigerator with the other grandchildren's. The four-year-old told me that one picture is a treasure map. They learn a lot from television programs. One friend told me to entertain them with tapes but I said that we don't do that. Their favorite request is "Grandma, tell us a story." Now if they give me one word or an animal, I'm off and running with an exciting story.

Our blueberry bushes have some berries and I'm hoping to pick some before the children eat all of them. We've been giving away big, black raspberries and people seem to appreciate them. As a youngster, I wandered all over our two farms and then came home with a gallon of small wild raspberries. Hunting them is one of the pleasant experiences of my teenage years. Maybe, I'd surprise a lark who was nesting or accidentally scare a hen pheasant from her nest. Turtles and frogs would jump in the water as I approached. I still think raspberry jelly is one of the best kinds that you can make.

Jessica Pomraning Is York Dairy Princess

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent
YORK (York Co.) — "Wow!" was the immediate reaction of Jessica Pomraning after being crowned the 1998-99 York County Dairy Princess.

Jessica, 16, is the daughter of Teresa and Myron Pomraning, Slab Road, Delta. She was crowned York County's 1998-99 dairy princess as the highlight of the annual pageant, held June 20 at the 4-H Center.

Jessica Yohe was named the first alternate. She is 16 and the daughter of Kathy and Jerry Yohe, York. Heather Crowl, 16-year-old daughter of Joyce and Ellis Crowl, Airville, was also named an alternate. As part of the judging and selection process, all three candidates presented speeches, skits, and responded to impromptu questions during the pageant program.

The new county princess is a junior at Red Lion Area High School and active in the marching band, yearbook staff, and school musical events. Jessica is an Airville 4-H dairy club member and exhibits her animals in local shows. She helps with various responsibilities on the Pomraning family's 60-milking operation and is employed part time at J.C. Penney.

For her skit presentation, Jessica performed as a high school athlete whose poor food choices led to a sporting-event injury and, in turn, taught her to eat a more healthful diet. Jessica's speech topic was a related one, focusing on the calcium crisis resulting in injuries and on helping consumers understand the new milk labels to make their best diet selections.

During on-stage questioning, Jessica was asked how she would personally benefit if selected as dairy princess. Her response was that it would help her to improve her communications skills toward her future job career.

Alternate Jessica Yohe made a speech presentation on how milk "does a body good," reviewing the numerous nutrients found in milk and how they help keep people's bodies in better health. Jessica became a magician in a long, flowing black robe for her skit, demonstrating how milk is magically change into various tasty dairy foods.

Questioned as to what had prompted her to enter the dairy princess pageant, Jessica explained her concern over the health of people, especially children, who do not eat proper diets, and her interest in helping to educate them toward better food consumption habits.

Jessica's family is part of the Stump Acres dairy operation, where she helps with some milking chores, as well as working part time at Hardee's Restaurant. She is a junior at Spring Grove Area High School and a member of the track and field team.

Alternate Heather Crowl became a television host for the Merry Moo Story Hour as her skit presentation, garbed in appropriate cow-fabric costume to tell a cow-related tale illustrated with an oversized storybook. Her "Where's Your Milk Mustache?" speech warned that not enough teen-agers are consuming milk and suggested a variety of alternative dairy products that help meet the body's daily need for the nutrients provided by milk.

When asked what she would hope to accomplish if chosen as the dairy princess, Heather related her interest in working with junior high, teen-age and senior citizen groups to share the dairy nutrition message.

Heather is a junior at Red Lion Area High School and active in the school and county chapters of the FFA. She is an Airville 4-H dairy club member and exhibits many of her 22 head of cattle. Heather has served as a York County Dairy Maid for three years.

Crowned as York County Dairy Maids were 14-year-olds April Daugherty and Janet Yohe. For their part of the pageant program, each gave a brief poster-illustrated speech on the benefits of drinking milk as opposed to consuming soft drinks and answered questions from emcee Chuck Cruickshank.

Janet is the daughter of Kathy and Jerry Yohe, York, and sister to alternate princess Jessica. She is a ninth-grader at Spring Grove, active in several sports and the school orchestra. Her farm responsibilities include helping with evening milkings.

April is the daughter of Terre Anne and Philip Daugherty, York, and a sister to retiring princess Amanda Daugherty. She helps with milking and dairy cleanup chores on the family's farm. A New Freedom Christian School eighth-grade student, April enjoys playing softball.

Named Dairy Miss for York County is Amanda Hoover. Amanda is the 10-year-old daughter of Rose and Paul Hoover, East Prospect, where her family maintains a dairy goat herd. A poem on dairying was her presentation for the program.

Rounding out the York dairy promotion team is Amber Thoman, 4, crowned as the Li'l Dairy Miss. Amber's parents are Gail and Gary Thoman, Dallastown. Amber likes playing with the farm's calves and kittens.

In her farewell as the outgoing princess, Amanda Hoover especially thanked her sister, April, for taking her place many times to help with the barn and milking chores while she fulfilled her princess responsibilities. She related her most embarrassing predicament as an elementary school promotion, during which she explained to the children that only "girl cows" give milk. When one young man became irate that "boy cows" were being overlooked and questioned her, another piped up that boy cows are used for meat. April breathed a sign of relief and quickly moved on to another subject.

"Work together as a team and have a good time," were her parting words of advice to the contestants as they awaited the final judging decision.

Serving as judges for the pageant were Chris Marsteller, Stewartstown, farm wife and current Mrs. Pennsylvania Globe; Paul Miller, Linglestown, retired Holstein dairyman and cattle classifier; and Ron Miller, Jacobus, candi-

Maryland Dairy Weekend Is Udderly Awesome

KAREN BUTLER

Maryland Correspondent

JEFFERSON, Md. — The Maryland Dairy Youth Weekend provided an "Udderly Awesome" opportunity for young people from both farming and non-farming backgrounds to learn about the dairy industry in an enjoyable, non-competitive atmosphere. Ninety-five dairy 4-H'ers attended the weekend adventure, billed as "An Udderly Awesome Adventure", held at the 4-H camp center here.

Now in its fifth year, the dairy weekend was coordinated by volunteers Susan Summers and Becky Long Chaney, former Frederick County 4-H'ers who have both gone on to awarded-winning careers as ag journalists and editors at the Frederick News-Post. As the eyes and ears of Frederick County agriculture, the two friends saw a need for a program tailored to youth interested in the dairy industry that stressed education.

"We felt lucky with the background we had, and we saw a need of young people who might not have that background," explained Summers. Even though Frederick is the largest dairy county in the state, some young people in 4-H interested in dairy projects don't actually live on a dairy farm. Some keep animals on a nearby farm, and others lease animals through the state's dairy leasing program. The dairy weekend provides an educational forum with top-notch speakers and hands-on activities that benefits all the youth, whether they come from a farming background or not.

Part of what made the weekend so fun was the non-competitive environment of the program. Often when dairy youth get together, it is to compete, either in the showing or in some other contest. The dairy weekend deliberately shifts the emphasis away from competing and focuses instead on fun and fellowship. "We thought it would be great to stress the non-competitive aspects," said Long Chaney.

In fact there was only one contest during the weekend, a junior dairyman's contest led by Dr. Lee Majeskie from the University of Maryland. The rest of the activities consisted of talks and workshops. David Hill, Alta Genetics, spoke to the group on dairy genetics. Denny Remsburg, general manager for DHIA, led a mock sale, guiding the young people in their decision making to improve their pretend herds. A series of round-robin workshops featured "Dairy Products," "Cows From Head to Tail," "Milk Glue," "Dairy First Aid," "Milk Promotion," and "Showmanship." And of course, there was time to play, the pizza party, dance, and movie night.

Ninety-five young people from around the state came to the 4-H camp center in Jefferson for the Maryland Dairy Youth Weekend. They took a break from the action to pose for this group picture just before lunch.

More than 75 sponsors contributed to the program, and about 25 volunteers gave their time to make it such a success. "When you do a program like this I think it snowballs, and everyone is eager to get involved," said Susan Summers. And as a way to practice their letter-writing skills, each and every sponsor will receive a hand-written thank-you card from a young person.

'Super Moo' Reigns In Somerset County

GAY BROWNLEE

Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — When she is "Super Moo," Melissa Powell, the new Somerset County Dairy Princess will do her dairy best to save the world from bones that are brittle and teeth that are rotting because calcium in sufficient amounts is not reaching them.

It all starts with drinking milk and eating dairy products. So if taking flight in her Holstein-colored cap helps the humans who lack a proper sense of direction, then the 16-year daughter of Charles and Kimberly Powell, Meyersdale, will have reached her happy goal.

Beck Ray, the alternate dairy princess, is the daughter of Jim and Bonnie Ray of Somerset.

In a creaky rocking chair, she read a bedtime story "A Dairy Tale," about "Bovine" who had an evil stepmother named

"Mastitis."

She will be a senior at Somerset Area High School.

Powell, who succeeds Jessica Lynch in holding the title, will be a Junior in the Salisbury-Elk Lick District.

In answering a question that master of ceremonies Robert Brown, director of the Somerset Cooperative Extension office, asked about the biggest challenge facing the dairy industry today, Powell mentioned land availability.

She believes that cities and suburban areas are expanding to a point where the dairy industry is being squeezed.

One solution, she observed would be for people who want a house to find an existing one to remodel instead of taking valuable land on which to build something new.

Among the gifts presented to Powell was a $1,000 scholarship for college, $200 from the Allied Milk Producers Cooperative ($300 will follow next March if incentives are met), and $100 Savings Bond from U.S. Bank.

Five dairy maids were recognized and participated in giving door prizes to numerous winners. The girls are Katie Stutzman, Nicole Powell, Rebekah Fox, Joy Tressler, and Jill Fox.

The Little Miss participants were Jill McWilliams, Rochell Gossman, Malorie Coddington, Brianna Trent, Melissa Paul, and Jennifer Martin.

Their escorts were Sam McWilliams, Jeremy Scheffel, Cayton Scheffel, Austin Coddington, Andrew Singo and Samuel Shober.

Judges for the event were June Bigelow from Williamsport, Blair County; Jeff Calvert and Renee Calvert, spouses who are relocating to Berlin, Somerset County, from Fairmont, W.Va.

Members of the Dairy Pageant Committee are Angie Shober, chairperson; Christin Singo, Jenny Plummer, Amy Paul, Katie Shaulis, Kelly Bittner and Amanda Meier.

The Dairy Promotion Committee is composed of Dorothy Naugle, Nina Ferko, Gloria Kaufman, Jayne Piatt, Helen Mishler, Pat Saylor, Donna Martin, Charlene McWilliams, Barbara Brant, Shelly Walker, Sue Tressler, Sylvia Mast, Lisa Michael, Kim Powell, and Darlene Yoder.

An ice cream social followed the pageant held in the Berlin-Brothersvalley High School.

The Susquehanna County 4-H Dairy Judging members have had a very good year thus far. The members have been practicing since the winter and have participated in a couple of contests. The county has a group of youth working on each side of the county and they occasionally get together for joint practices.

At the annual Penn State spring dairy judging contest, five individuals competed. In the senior 4-H division, the team of Andrea Garner, Justin Garner, and Jeremiah Fearnley placed seventh overall. A special highlight was a sixth place finish by Andrea Garner.

Ben Hoover and Matt Fearnley participated in the junior division. Ben placed ninth in this contest.

More than 200 participants competed at this statewide event, including 54 junior 4-H members and 49 senior 4-H members.

The annual Delaware Valley College dairy judging contest was held on Saturday, April 18. Susquehanna County again had five 4-H members competing in this contest.

The lone senior member, Andrea Garner, placed first overall in the contest. Andrea was also fourth in reasons scoring.

Susquehanna County's junior team had a great day at Delaware Valley. They placed first overall in the contest—a whole 26 points ahead of the second place team. Individual highlights for the juniors were, Ben Hoover, fourth; Katie Onyon, fifth; Jessie Sartell, tenth, and Justin Garner, fourteenth.

The 4-H Dairy Judging teams are now practicing for summer contests and the State 4-H Dairy Judging Contest to be held in August. Winners at the state contest will qualify for national contests at either Madison, WI, or Louisville, KY.

Any other youth who may be interested are encouraged to attend the practice sessions. Dairy judging is an excellent way to learn more about dairy cattle, public speaking, and working as a team.

Leaders for 4-H Dairy Judging for 1998 are Dave Castrogiovanni and Josh Harvatine. If you are interested, call one of these leaders or the Penn State Extension office in Montrose, (717) 278-1158 for more details.

Irish Hill Shamrock 4-H Club

The Irish Hill Shamrock 4-H Club met at the Birchardville Hall. The club members decided which community service projects should be held. The projects that were chosen are giving used toys to needy children and giving items to the Humane Society.

The elections of officers for the 1998 session of the club was also held. The results of the election are: president, Justin Smith; vice president, Shaloam Birchard; secretary/news reporter, Liz Holbert; and treasurer Chantal Birchard.

East Rush 4-H Club
The East Rush 4-H Club held a meeting in April at the East Rush United Methodist Church. Zachary Jones led the American Pledge and Alyssa Jones led the 4-H pledge. Then the club members introduced themselves to the new 4-H members. The secretary called the roll and each member had to say their favorite flower.

The club planned for the food booth on May 16 at the Harford Fairgrounds. The club members discussed a teen sleepover at the Sayre High School, the Leader Recognition Banquet, Officers Training, and Ambassador Conference. Local Government Day, the Shooting Sports Fun Day, and Camp Brule were also explained. Project books were handed out by the leader.

The club met again in May. Wyatt Adams led the American Pledge and Darren Chilson led the 4-H pledge. Don Hardic gave a report on the Leader Recognition Banquet. It was a great success. Ben Hardic and Megan Wescott gave a report on officers training and that also was a great success. Camp Brule was discussed.

The next County Council meeting was announced. On July 22 there will be the one-day trip to New York City. State Achievement days is on Aug. 4-6. Members must be 13 years old and up to attend State Days.

WATERMELON—A SUMMERTIME TREAT

Did you know that there are over 50 varieties of watermelons? They range in size from five to 50 pounds!

Most of us are familiar with the red-flesh of watermelons, but here are also orange and yellow-flesh varieties. The reference books state there is very little flavor difference among the colors, but the red-flesh watermelons appear to be the most popular.

Watermelons are about 92 percent water and eight percent sugar. They are a good source of potassium and vitamin A and a fair source of vitamin C.

Watermelons seeds are edible. In China, they are often roasted, salted and eaten like popcorn. Beware—watermelon seeds are high in fat!

Seedless varieties of watermelons have been around for 50 years. Even though they are considered seedless, the frequently have small, soft, edible seeds that are similar to those found in cucumbers.

Are you interested in trying a different way of serving watermelon? The following watermelon treat ideas are from the National Watermelon Promotion Board.

Watermelon Sorbet

6 cups watermelon juice (In a blender or food processor, process chunks of seeded watermelon until liquefied)
1/3 cup lemon juice
1-1/2 cups sugar

In a large bowl, stir all ingredients together until the sugar is dissolved. Pour the mixture into an ice cream freezer. Freeze according to the manufacturer's instructions. Spoon the mixture into a freezer-safe container; cover and freeze until firm. Makes eight cups.

Watermelon-Blueberry Banana Split

2 large bananas
8 "scoops" watermelon (Use an ice cream scoop to scoop balls of watermelon. Remove seeds if needed)
1 pint fresh blueberries

1/2 cup vanilla low-fat yogurt
1/4 cup crunchy cereal nuggets
Peel bananas and cut in half crosswise; cut each piece in half lengthwise. For each serving, place two banana pieces against the side of a shallow dish. Place a scoop of watermelon at each end of the dish. Fill the center of the dish with blueberries. Stir the yogurt until smooth; spoon it over the watermelon. Sprinkle with cereal nuggets. Makes four servings.

Wacky Watermelon Pie

1 container (12 ounces) frozen non-dairy whipped topping, thawed
1 box (3 ounces) watermelon-flavored gelatin
1/4 cut water
2 cups watermelon balls
1 nine-inch crumb pie shell
In a large bowl, fold the whipped topping, gelatin, and water together. Fold in the watermelon balls. Spoon the mixture into the crumb pie shell. Chill for two hours before serving. Makes eight servings.

Watermelon-Strawberry Shake

1 container (8 ounces) lemon non-fat yogurt
2 cups watermelon, cubed and seeded
1 pint fresh strawberries, cleaned and hulled
1 medium banana, peeled and sliced

In a blender or food processor, process yogurt, watermelon, strawberries, and the banana until smooth and frothy. Serve immediately. Makes four servings.

Watermelon Strawberry Frozen Treats

Pour prepared Watermelon-Strawberry Shake into small paper cups. Freeze, inserting popsicle sticks or plastic spoons when the mixture is partially frozen.

on the fabric, then press firmly with a white blotter, check several spots and repeat with a little water mixed with detergent. If no color appears on the blotter, the quilt can be washed:

- Soak the quilt for about 30 minutes in a bathtub filled with lukewarm water. Drain the water, without removing the quilt, and then refill, adding about half a cup mild, liquid dish detergent such as Ivory. Gently agitate from time to time for about 30 minutes. Drain and refill the tub with cool water several times until all evidence of soap is rinsed away.

- If bleaching is necessary, use half a cup per half-tubful of water of a dilute solution of oxygen bleach (such as Clorox 2). Soak for about 15 to 20 minutes, then repeat the detergent bath and rinse. (Old stains may be set for good, and trying too zealously remove them can damage the quilt).

- Gently squeeze out excess water—do not wring the quilt. Lay quilt out flat on absorbent towels and lightly press out as much water as you can.

- On bright, dry days, dry the quilt outdoors. Place it face-down on a sheet or a cotton mattress pad and out of direct sunlight. Cover with another cotton sheet. To dry a quilt indoors, lay it flat on towels and aim an electric fan over the surface. Never place a quilt on a line to dry, as uneven distribution of weight can weaken the fabric and stitching.

Pennsylvania Sweet Corn Is Here

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — After two years of late starts for Pennsylvania's vegetable crops due to cool spring weather, 1998 is shaping up to be an early start for many vegetable crops including the all-time favorite—sweet corn. Abundant supplies of fresh, locally grown sweet corn are expected this season.

Many growers will achieve their goal of supplying Pennsylvania sweet corn for the Fourth of July holiday and some growers who cover their early crop with plastic are already harvesting. In certain localities, however, growers do not expect the season to really begin until mid-July.

"Mild weather in early spring allowed many growers to plant extra early," explains Fred Funk, former chairman of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program and Lancaster County corn grower. "Most areas experienced extended periods of rain in early May followed by cool and dry periods that may cause some gaps in the harvest sequence. The recent warm weather has increased the sugar content so that the early varieties are unusually sweet this year," he adds.

For sweet corn, sufficient rainfall at the critical periods of pollination and ear development is essential for quality corn although many Pennsylvania growers are equipped with irrigation to provide the needed moisture during the critical periods. Some growers cover their early sweet corn with clear plastic mulch creating a greenhouse environment over the seeds. This encourages quick germination and early growth, producing corn one or two weeks earlier than a crop grown on bare ground.

The key to good sweet corn is freshness. The sugar in sweet corn rapidly begins turning to starch within hours after being harvested. About 40% of the sugar can be lost in six hours at room temperature. Refrigeration slows this process, but the sooner corn is eaten after harvesting, the better.

Many growers are growing sugar-enhanced or super-sweet varieties that genetically have more sugar in the kernels. Some of these early sugar-enhanced varieties were developed at Penn State University. Because they have more sugar to begin with, they can be stored for longer periods and still have acceptable sweetness. However, standard sweet corn varieties, when purchased freshly harvested, will still have a delicious, traditional corn flavor and sweetness.

According to growers across the state most Pennsylvanians prefer bi-color corn, traditionally known as Butter and Sugar. However, in south central and southeastern Pennsylvania, white is the preferred corn. Certain localities and clienteles still like their corn to be yellow so many growers continue to grow yellow varieties on some of their acreage.

Regardless of the color, Pennsylvanians can expect to enjoy an abundant supply of sweet corn each year. It is the leading vegetable crop in the Commonwealth with about 19,000 acres grown annually. Most of this sweet corn acreage is grown for fresh market sales. As a result, Pennsylvania ranks as the sixth largest fresh sweet corn producing state in the nation. Fresh corn will be available from July into October. About 2,700 acres of the sweet corn acreage are grown to be processed into frozen, dried or canned corn products available year round.

While fresh sweet corn is a delicious ingredient in many recipes, it is most popular served right on the cob, and is so simple to prepare. Simply boil husked ears for 5-7 minutes, or grill the ears in the husk for 15-20 minutes after soaking them in water for about 10 minutes. Fresh corn on the cob is also easily prepared in the microwave by wrapping two husked ears in a damp paper towel and cooking them for seven minutes on high power, turning the ears once.

No matter how it's prepared, fresh sweet corn is a good source of vitamins A and C, and a single ear contains only 90 calories. The following corn recipes from the 125th Anniversary Pennsylvania State Grange Commemorative Cookbook are two additional ways to include corn in your meal:

CORN CHOWDER (serves 6)

3 potatoes, diced
6 cups corn
3 hard boiled eggs, diced
1 quart milk
1 pint water
2 tablespoons butter
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Cook potatoes in the water for 5 minutes or until soft. Add corn, butter, eggs, milk and seasonings. Cook 10-15 minutes and serve. Use fresh corn when possible.

CORN PIE (serves 6-8)

3 cups fresh corn
3 hard boiled eggs
2/3 cup milk
1/4 cup flour
1/4 stick butter
1 teaspoon salt
dash or pepper
1 double 9" pie crust

Make pie shell. Mix corn, eggs, salt, flour and milk together. Put into pie shell. Dot with butter and sprinkle with pepper. Put pie crust on top. Bake at 450 degrees F for 10 minutes. Then finish baking at 250 degrees F for 1 hour.

Quick buying tips for Pennsylvania Sweet Corn

The Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program offers these tips when buying sweet corn:

- Look for fresh green husks and ears that are filled all the way to the tip.
- Kernels should be tender, full and firm enough to puncture easily under the slightest pressure.
- To preserve the corn's sugar content and flavor, refrigerate immediately after purchase.

4-H County Fair

For the first time, the Gloucester County N.J. 4-H Fair will run from Thursday, July 23 through Sunday, July 26.

For all four days, the Gloucester county 4-H Fairgrounds in Mullica Hill will become a beehive of activity. Route #77 will swarm with a steady stream of vehicles bringing more than 900 4-Hers and their exhibits to show off to more than 12,000 fair visitors. The fair hours will be Thursday, July 23, from 4 p.m.-9:30 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, July 24 and 25 from 9 a.m. - 9:00 p.m. and Sunday, July 26 from 9 a.m. - 6 p.m.

Four the four days of the annual Gloucester County 4-H Fair the animal barns will burst with rabbits, horses, pigs, goats, steers and cows, and the exhibit barn will show visitors 4-H woodworking, needle work, quilts, crafts, vegetables, and flowers.

Exhibiting marks the culmination of a full year of work for 4-H members.

In addition to 4-H exhibits and shows, the fair will also host both the New Jersey Peach Festival and the Gloucester County Tomato Expo, both of which will provide exhibits, tasting, and contest throughout the four days.

On Thursday, horse, and swine shows will be followed by the naming of the Gloucester County 4-H Ambassador Team and a performance by the Pitman Hobo Band at 8 p.m. Friday's events will include sheep, rabbit, and small animal shows, a Western Horse show, a livestock auction, and the Miss Peach Pageant.

Children can also enjoy a magic show and compete in a Kiddie Tractor Pull. The Gangi dancers performance will be followed by country dance lessons.

Saturday is "Kids Day."

Activities for kids start with a diaper derby and baby parade followed by turtle races and a frog jumping contest. On stage, Sci Fi Robot will present a children's program and 4-H Leader John Means will present a Rock 'N Reptile Show. Arrangements will be made to have your purchased animal taken to the slaughter house and packaged for your freezer, roasts, chops, bacon, even scrap-ple. The 4-H members who raise these animals use the money to purchase new animals for next year. Many set aside any profit they receive toward their future educational goals.

Is your preference chicken, seafood, or pork? On Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 4 p.m. - 7:30 p.m. a special food will be the feature for dinner. 4-H HAPPENINGS

Elm-Penryn 4-H Club

Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club members enjoyed a pizza party at the last scheduled meeting of the club for the summer, held at Pleasant View Retirement Community on June 15 with seven members, one leader and one parent present.

The meeting was called to order by the club organizational leader and members answered the roll by telling their favorite hobby, sport, or project. The Pledge of Allegiance was led by Julia Boyer, and the 4-H Pledge was led by Elisabeth Stahl (Cara Hershey held the flag.) The minutes from the last meeting were read and approved. Alicia Waltz was a guest of Elisabeth Stahl.

Everyone helped themselves to the pizza as the business part of the meeting was conducted. In old business, activities for the club roundup (which is to be held at Pleasant View on Saturday, July 18, from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.) were planned in detail. All club members will be informed of the roundup through the phone chain, and a press release announcing this event will be sent to area newspapers in early July.

Snacks were being munched on as new business was discussed. It was decided to begin the 1998-99 Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club in October. A meeting to reorganize is planned for Friday, Oct. 23. It will be at this meeting when area children and youth ages 7-18 may register for membership and sign up for project classes. Members put together a list of suggested projects to be offered during the 1998-1999 club year. They hope to include woodworking, backpacking/camping, geology, entomology, sewing, cooking, basketry, advanced photography, fire safety, rocketry, bee keeping, child care/babysitting, health/first aid, strawberries, forestry/trees, fishing, candy making, crocheting, beading/crafts, cake decorating, pet care, rubber stamping and pottery/ceramics.

Members planned the Monday evening club meetings that will begin in November 1998 and continue once each month through June 1999. The special features of these club meetings were planned to include swimming, basketball, special guest speakers from the Humane Society, Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission, Pennsylvania Game Commission, Penn Township police department, and a local child care facility. Additionally, it is hopeful that a candy maker will do a tasty demonstration for us.

In the upcoming club year, Julia Boyer will hold the office of photographer, and will also be sharing the office of secretary with Stephanie Keller. Information about the 1998-1999 Elm-Penryn 4-H Community Club, including member registration, projects offered and club meetings, will be mailed to current club members by the 4-H office in the fall.

There were several community service activities made available to club members beginning the week of June 14. Elisabeth Stahl, Stephanie Keller, and Julia Boyer volunteered for some of the activities to be held in Pleasant View Retirement Community.

ADADC used local milk processor's products in professional photos for newspapers to explain new labels for skim and 2% milk, which took effect on Jan. 1, 1998.

ADADC Uses New Milk Labels To Promote New Products

SYRACUSE, NY - As of Jan. 1, 1998 all milk processors were required by the FDA to change labels on skim and 2% milk to reflect new, more accurate names for these products.

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC), used milk cartons from local processors like Farmland Dairies, Upstate Farms, Tuscan-Dellwood, Welsh Farms, Crowley, and Sunnydale on television and in newspapers to explain the new changes to consumers.

The exposure in the media was also used by ADADC to show consumers stylish new milk packaging and provide them with information on the many new milk products being offered locally by processors.

In Syracuse, on CBS affiliate WTVH-TV, ADADC showcased the bright, colorful new Holstein-pattern graphics appearing on Upstate Farm's premium line of milks. Articles in newspapers ranging from the tiny Sullivan County Democrat which reaches 8,000 people, to Clifton, NJ's Dateline Journal which reaches 65,000 people, to New York City's Staten Island Advance that reaches 80,000 people, made consumers aware of such new products as Upstate Farm's "Milk For Life," Farmland Dairies' "Special Request," and Sunnydale's "Natural By Nature."

Get More From Vegetable Gardening

The classic, scarecrow-guarding, long-rowed garden creates a lovely picture of order. But if you are limited on space, you can't sacrifice precious vegetable-yielding soil to walkways between rows.

Intensive gardening is the answer for the gardener who wants to conserve space, or the number of steps taken - literally - to get gardening chores done. The goal with intensive gardening is to harvest the most produce possible from a given amount of space, said Ohio State University horticulturists. You do this by creating an ideal plant environment to get better yields with less labor.

Most intensive gardens are designed in raised beds. While the raised bed gives you the opportunity to provide your plants with plenty of deep, rich soil, you can still incorporate the principles of intensive gardening into any type of garden.

The first maxim of intensive gardening is simple - if you don't have room for plants to grow out, take them up.

Vining and sprawling plants such as tomatoes, cucumbers, squash and pole beans are all vertical candidates. Train the plants to poles, trellises or cages to leave more room on the ground for other plants. Some plants, like peas, entwine themselves without any help; others, like tomatoes, need to be tied.

Keep in mind, though, that these trellised plants will cast a shadow. Plant shade-tolerant crops such as lettuce to take advantage of the reprieve from the summer sun.

Interplanting is the other essential step to intensive gardening. Basically, you plant two or more types of veggies close together at the same time. But don't go planting all your plants close together; there is a science to this.

First, take into account the plants' growth period, root depth, height, season, and light and nutrient requirements. You want to interplant short-rooted crops next to long-rooted crops, fast-maturing next to all-season long plants, and shade tolerant plants next to tall plants.

Once you choose the companion crops, you can interplant them any number of ways. The most common is to alternate rows within a bed. You also can distribute various species throughout the bed.

To avoid crowding, space the plants so the center of one plant is the same distance from the center of the plants around it. The spacing distance on the seed packet is the distance from the center of one plant to the center of the next.

To figure this dimension out for different plants, add the center distance of the two different plants you are interplanting together (for example, leaf lettuce = 4 inches, and green peppers = 12 inches, total = 16), then divide in half to determine your final spacing. You should plant lettuce 8 inches from pepper plants.

The close spacing creates a solid leaf canopy, so weeds have a tougher time growing, but they are far enough apart that the plants don't compete for nutrients.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Jackson Pin Thimblers 4-H Club

The Jackson Pin Thimblers sewing and crocheting club has reorganized with five new members. Officers were elected as follows: president, Lynette Belford; vice president, Shannon Wallace; secretary/news reporter, Jenni Marcho; and treasurer, Tami Glover.

The club has decided to participate in Project Linus. This organization collects blankets for seriously, chronically, terminally ill, or traumatized children. This club will be donating yarn for blankets that will hopefully give many children security.

The members received their Heavenly Scent Candles for their first fund raiser of the year on April 8. Explained by the Marcho's, the members learned selling techniques and about the different varieties of candles available through Marcho's Florist. The members plan to get busy selling. Everyone wished member Tami Glover good luck on her tonsil removal.

Bethany Page called the April meeting of the Jackson Pin Thimblers to order at the North Jackson Methodist Church. Lynette Bedford shared what she had learned at the officer's training session at the County Office Building. The candle fund raiser is continuing to go well for all the members. The club welcomed three new members - Jessica Terpstra, Sarah Manzer, and Sarah Hardy.

The American Pledge led by Tami Glover opened the May 6 meeting of the club at the North Jackson United Methodist Church. The sewers were informed that judging day is July 9. The members made plans to go to a Red Baron's game, the circus, and to Cole's Park in August. All members have work to do on their projects before July 9.

Cowboys and Cubbers 4-H Club

The Cowboys and Cubbers 4-H club held its organizational meeting in March. The members discussed several upcoming events, including the horse clinic on April 18 and 19, held at Sue Smith's.

Enrollment forms were handed out to all the members for this year. Also, special containers were given to each member to be filled with first aid items.

Dr. Scott Bidell from the Montrose Veterinary Clinic came to the meeting and talked about general horse maintenance.

As a bonus, 4-H club jackets were presented to each member from a previous fund raiser.

At the May meeting, 13 people were in attendance with five new members.

On May 23 the club held a clinic with demonstrations given. On June 28 the members will be going to the Peranich Farm to see as miniature horse foal.

The club also held a Mother's Day pancake breakfast at the Silver Lake Fire Hall.

Members filled out judging sheets of the different confirmation of the horses to enter in a New York State contest. The Cowboys and Cubbers Club members also did a community service in May. A couple of local ladies that were involved in My Brother's Keeper came to the club meeting and helped the members make a quilt for a local family.

Paws And Tails 4-H Dog Club

The Paws and Tails 4-H Dog Club met on March 1. Pledges were said. The group quizzed themselves on equipment for grooming and training a dog (different leads, muzzles, brushes, and harnesses).

Renee Coy talked about the Skill-A-Thon that she participated in at Penn State Achievement Days last year and told the group what topics are quizzed on. The group talked about the agility course that they will help build at the Humane Society.

Sunrise Sunset 4-H Club

The Sunrise Sunset 4-H Club's first meeting took place at 4-H Leader, Mrs. Ileana Seman's, house on April 25. Member in attendance at the meeting were Ann Wilbur, Brian Templeman, Catie Durran, Elizabeth Seman, Erica Seman, Jesse Durran, and Paul Shelly. Shortly after everyone arrived, everyone introduced themselves by saying their names, ages, grades, and explaining why they were in 4-H.

Then the club leaders discussed the projects that they were able to do and help with. After that, the year's new officers were elected.

The election results were: president Erica Seman; vice president, Elizabeth Seman, secretary/treasurer, Kim Komar; news reporter, Jesse Durran; scrapbook, Sarah Holmes; game leaders, Ann Wilbur and Catie Durran.

Hoofs In Clover 4-H Club

The Hoofs In Clover 4-H Club met at the Elk Lake High School lunchroom.

In February the club members voted to make up an Easter basket for a needy child and collect canned foods for a local food bank. Club members worked on mobiles for 4-H Awareness Week. Everyone had a great time creating animal cut outs and posters to show all the different 4-H projects that are available.

At the March meeting, Debbie Place gave a demonstration to all members on teeth brushing. Upcoming events were discussed: Unadilla auction, clinic with Sue Smith. Veterinarian Rita Slocum was the guest speaker. She answered various questions on horse health.

In April, club members brought in candy and toys and put together an Easter basket for a needy child. They welcomed Brittany Hollister as a new member to the club. Lindsay Place gave a demonstration on the Morgan. Members were reminded of upcoming events. Information was handed out on Stall Cleaning, the Pivot Foot, and Natural Balance tips.

Binkley & Hurst Schedules Field Days

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Mark your calendar now for the Binkley and Hurst Bros., Inc. Field Days and Equipment Demonstration, scheduled Aug. 4-5 at Rothsville Station Road.

The event will feature daily seminars by Ken Ferrie, crop and soils consultant for Farm Journal; equipment demonstrations by Case, Kinze, Sunflower, and others; and field corn, sweet corn, and vegetable plots.

In 1990 Ken Ferrie started Crop-Tech Consulting, which serves farmers in central Illinois. As an independent consultant, Ferrie directly oversees 55,000 acres through farmer clients. At the same time, he works with leading fertilizer dealers to provide agronomic direction for another 150,000 acres.

His farmer clients are all within a one-hour drive of his Bloomington-area office. The self-imposed distance rule is part of Ferrie's hands-on approach to consulting — and farming. In addition to providing soil tests and fertility recommendations, he helps clients with a wide range of tasks — seedbed management, insect and disease control, residue management, fine-tuning equipment and manure management.

Ferrie, field agronomist for Farm Journal magazine, puts in almost 150 test plots each year, testing everything from herbicides and varieties to planters and closing wheels. Data gathered in the plot research helps fine-tune his systems approach to farming. As a way to serve more farmers, Ferrie produces a Farm Journal video series, A Systems Approach to Precision Farming.

Ken Ferrie

Prior to founding Crop-Tech, Ferrie worked as a company agronomist for Farm Service cooperative. Before that, he served as production specialist and manager for a fertilizer plant in Illinois and as maintenance manager for an Iowa cooperative.

A native of Cresco, Iowa, Ferrie grew up working on his family's farm, tending hogs, cattle and a dairy herd. He holds a bachelor's degree in agronomy and agricultural business from Illinois State University. He also holds an associate's degree in agricultural business from Ellsworth Community

Also, for one day only, a Main Street Marketing Tour will feature a Case-sponsored product show of new tractors on Tuesday, Aug. 4.

Food will be available for purchase at the field day.

Horticulture Advisor

Timothy Elkner, Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County

We are now moving into summer, the main season for vegetable production. As usual, the weather has been anything but ordinary. First we had cool, wet weather, then hot and dry, then hot and wet, and now we're back to hot and dry. An next week - who knows?

Unfortunately, these variations in the weather make it difficult for you to produce a high quality crop. When we have these types of variable conditions your attention to detail will affect the ultimate quality of the crop.

Hot, dry weather will require you to pay close attention to the water status of your fields. Alternating periods of excessively wet and then hot and dry weather will stress your plants because it will affect root growth. During the wet periods root growth will be reduced because the plants will have adequate water with only a small root area.

However, when the weather suddenly turns hot and dry this small mass of roots will not be able to supply the water that the plant needs. So watch your fields closely this week and next for the early signs of water stress and apply water before growth is slowed and yields are reduced.

When you do irrigate be sure to water thoroughly. Drip irrigation allows water to be applied at a rate that will be readily absorbed by the soil. If you are using overhead irrigation be sure to apply the water at a rate that will allow it to be absorbed into the soil rather than running off. Maximum irrigation rates are 0.40 inch per hour for sandy soils, 0.30 inch per hour for loamy soils, and 0.20 inch per hour for clay soils.

Blotchy Ripening of Greenhouse Tomatoes Blotchy ripening of tomatoes in greenhouses is a frustrating experience for tomato growers. Every spring I receive calls from growers asking how to solve this problem.

Unfortunately, blotchy ripening can be caused by several factors including excessive heat, high humidity, low light levels and low potassium levels. Some varieties are more likely to experience this problem as well. What should you do if you are having this problem? The first thing to do is to have a tissue test to determine if low levels of potassium are to blame. This is the most common cause of blotchy ripening and the easiest to solve.

Environmental factors such as temperature and humidity are not easily controlled and you need to minimize the effects of these factors by variety selection. For greenhouse production of tomatoes you should plant varieties developed to grow in a greenhouse. Examples are Trust, President, and Match.

Some people don't want to grow greenhouse varieties because they are afraid that these types have less taste than regular varieties. However, these newer cultivars produce a very high quality tomato and I would encourage you to try one or more of these varieties if you are having problems with uneven ripening.

Late Blight and Early Blight of Tomatoes. The potential exists to have problems with Late Blight this year. There have already been documented cases of Late Blight in Pennsylvania, New York, and Ohio.

There is the possibility that more Late Blight is present in PA because of the large number of potatoes that overwintered in harvested fields from last year. Our mild winter did not kill these tubers as it normally would have so the potential for more Late Blight inoculum is greater because it survives in overwintering tubers.

Growers are advised to scout tomato and potato fields regularly during weather favorable for the development of this potentially devastating disease.

Weather conditions have already been favorable for Early Blight development on early-planted tomatoes in Lancaster county. Dr. Alan MacNab of the Pathology Department at Penn State is advising a fungicide application to tomatoes planted in early to mid-May.

Fields planted after mid-May should if crop rotation is being practiced and fields are scouted regularly. Growers can receive the latest disease updates by calling the PDA's hotline at 1-800-PENN-IPM. You need a touch tone phone to utilize these reports.

Sweet Corn IPM

Sweet corn growers who planted for the early market are harvesting some of the earliest corn they have ever grown, thanks to our warmer-than-normal spring. However, this same warm weather is also resulting in the early appearance of corn earworms.

Normally these pests have to migrate up from the warmer southern areas but this year they are already in our area. Fortunately, the population is currently below damaging levels. However, I advise growers to follow the population levels of both corn earworm and European corn borer, our regular early-season pest.

Scout fields regularly for these pests, especially during corn silking, and adjust your spray schedules appropriately. You can also receive an updated report on the trap catches of the corn pests by calling the PDA hotline mentioned above.

Harvest Procedures

harvest in their produce by following proper harvest and handling procedures.

First, harvest your crops at the proper maturity for your market. Zucchini should be small and tender while cantaloupes should be harvested at half-slip to full slip to have the best taste. Harvest in the cool of morning whenever possible and move harvested produce to a cool, shaded location as soon as possible.

Store any harvested produce for the shortest time necessary. The sooner you get your produce to market or the consumer, the better their eating experience will be. And always handle produce like the delicate commodity it is. Avoid drops, bruising and any rough handling procedures. The extra care you take when harvesting and handling your produce will result in more satisfied buyers and more return sales for you.

National Farmers Organization Joins U.S. General Accounting Office In Calling For Safe, Imported Foods

AMES, Iowa — Emphasizing the importance of safer foods for America's consumers, National Farmers Organization joins with the General Accounting Office in its recommendations to Congress to upgrade and expand food inspection and import procedures.

While imports increase at a steady pace, Food and Drug Administration testing of individual products coming into this country has fallen from about eight percent in fiscal year 1992 to 1.7 percent in 1997. Out of about 81 million cases of foodborne illnesses, up to 9,100 deaths occur each year, according to GAO.

In a comprehensive review of federal programs aimed at ensuring safe food imports, the GAO recently made recommendations to more adequately prevent unsafe food from ending up in American supermarkets, restaurants and homes. Costs for medical treatment and productivity losses associated with foodborne illnesses and deaths range from $6.6 billion to $37.1 billion, according to USDA Economic Research Service.

National Farmers is forwarding a letter of support for the recommendations to the U.S. Senate subcommittee which requested an evaluation of the food import system. The letter will also be sent to the Director of Food and Agriculture Issues for the GAO.

"The GAO has taken the lead in creating solutions to imported food safety concerns, and we urge Congress to move ahead in instituting the agency's recommendations," National Farmers President Gene Paul emphasized.

The GAO review found that procedures need to be more consistent and reliable to prevent safety risks caused by foods brought in from outside the U.S.

GAO recommended that FDA receive greater authority to require countries to have food safety systems equivalent to that in the U.S. before their foods would be imported. "At National Farmers we have long-supported equal quality standards for imported and domestic products to assure healthy food for consumers," Paul said.

"If the U.S. provides countries with better reasons to produce food under the same high a better economic and competitive situation," Paul said.

GAO also called for FDA and the Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) to better target inspection resources on foods posing greater health risks. Currently, the agencies' computer systems are not designed to single out those foods, but may more often address issues not directly impacting consumer safety.

FSIS has jurisdiction over meat, poultry and some egg products, while FDA regulates all other foods. Both agencies work closely with the Customs Service and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Top Horses To Gather For Children's Show

QUENTIN (Lebanon Co.) — More than 200 of the top American Saddlebred horses in the country, including a number of reigning world's champions, will gather here July 22-25 to raise money for central Pennsylvania's needy children.

The ninth annual Children's Benefit Horse Show will pit more than 200 American Saddlebred, Morgan, and roadster horses and Hackney ponies from 20 states against one another in contests of animation, speed, and brilliance.

The show, presented by the United Professional Horseman's Association (UPHA), Chapter 15, benefits the Community Action Program of Lancaster County. It carries the American Horse Shows Association's highest, or "A" rating, and for three years in a row has been voted one of the top shows in the county by UPHA members.

The majority of the horses competing at the show are of the American Saddlebred breed. They have been called "the world's most beautiful horse" and the "peacocks of the show ring" because of their high action, lofty head carriage and thrilling performances.

The funds raised by the show benefit the Community Action Program of Lancaster County. Half the money goes to the Shelter for Abused Women, which provides shelter, counseling, recreation and tutoring in a violence-free atmosphere for the children of abused women.

The remainder of the money is donated to the Community Action Program Child Care Center, which provides development day care for the children of low-income families. The money raised in 1997 was used to subsidize the cost of day care for low-income families.

In addition to four evenings of top equestrian competition, the show will feature an academy show beginning at 11 a.m. on Saturday, July 25. The academy show is for beginning riders who take lessons but do not own a show horse.

"The academy show gives beginning riders, both children and adults, the opportunity to try showing in a relaxed, low key atmosphere," said Marty Waldman, UPHA Chapter president. "The classes are designed to allow riders of all skill levels to compete. Riders compete on the same horses on which they take riding instruction, and dress codes are relaxed, to enable riders to give the show ring a try without making a big financial commitment."

Saturday, July 25 will also feature a Model Horse Show, in which toy horses are exhibited in much the same way as their live counterparts. Throughout the run of the show spectators will also enjoy a shopping village, a number of food stands serving refreshments, and a playground for children. A limited number of box seats in the covered grandstand are available for $5 each, and spectators are invited to bring lawn chairs and a picnic to enjoy at ringside.

Admission is by donation: $5 for adults, $2 for children ages 5 and over is suggested. Children ages 4 and under are admitted free. For more information, phone (717) 898-5874.

Land O'Lakes/Dairyman's Plan Major Cheese Whey Plant

ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — Two dairy cooperatives officially merged this week, Land O'Lakes and Dairyman's Cooperative Creamery Association.

Recently they also announced plans to equip and operate a large scale cheese and whey fractions facility in Tulare, California.

A 300,000-square-foot food processing facility was recently acquired in Tulare by Dairyman's in anticipation of a business venture with Land O'Lakes. Plans are now in place to remodel and expand the 15-year-old building into a cheese plant and next generation whey fractions facility. Whey fractions are being used extensively as a high protein ingredient in sports and nutrition drinks and prepared food mixes. Cooperative officials indicate the planning, developing and equipping of the plant will be handled on an expedited basis.

"As Land O'Lakes and Dairyman's come together, we have a clear vision of what we will accomplish in the years to come. At the top of the list is the development of this facility to add value to member's milk and meet our customers' demands for cheese and high value whey products," said Jack Gherty, president and chief executive officer of Land O'Lakes. "Our still new cheese/whey facility in Perham, Minn. is already operating at its capacity, so we are confident of the need for additional volume."

Jack Prince, president and chief executive officer of Dairyman's, said, "This is an exciting development and it's indicative of Land O'Lakes commitment to matching its long history as a national marketer of value-added products with an equally extensive system for procuring and processing milk nationally."

Agricultural Preservation Board Approves Farmland

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Agricultural Land Preservation Board has approved easement purchases for seven farms across the commonwealth, Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. recently announced.

"Gov. Tom Ridge is committed to the protection of farmland across the state to ensure the strength of Pennsylvania's agriculture industry for future generations," said Hayes, who chairs the Agricultural Land Preservation Board.

The board also supported the state Agriculture Department's submission of a proposal to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) for $2.89 million in federal funding for farmland preservation in Pennsylvania. If secured, the federal funding would assist in the preservation of 31 farms in 18 counties, totaling 4,663 acres. In two previous rounds, the state Department of Agriculture secured $1.27 million in additional funding from NRCS.

Created in 1989, the Pennsylvania Agricultural Land Preservation Board is responsible for the oversight of the state Farmland Preservation Program. It allows the state and counties to purchase development rights, referred to as easements, to guarantee that farms will remain as agricultural land.

Including three county-owned easements accepted today, the Farmland Preservation Program has protected 938 farms in 39 counties encompassing 118,873 acres.

Following is a list of the seven properties, including owner, township, acreage, and purchase cost:

- Eric County — Daniel and Margaret Betts, Northeast Township, 62 acres, $117,792;
- Lancaster County — Herbert B. and Ethel Jean Weidler, Warwick Township, 78 acres, $199,020;
- Lebanon County — Gerald G. and Constance D. Hoffer, South Annville Township, 62 acres, $92,550;
- Union County — Ralph L. and Florence M. Stahlnecker, Buffalo Township, 105 acres, $101,887; Titus and Ada Reiff, East Buffalo Township, 127 acres, $120,609;
- Westmoreland County — Frank E. and Quintin L. Suter, East Huntingdon Township, 100 acres, $204,659; and
- York County — R. Leon and Marlene Kilgore, Lower Chanceford Township, 196 acres, $266,503.

Reel Time Savings to Real Farmers

"We feed 100 milk cows and a total of 150 animals with four loads per day at three different locations. We save 1 1/2 - 2 hours of feeding time every day with our Knight Reel Auggie tow."

Russ and Kris Schroeder
Agriprize Holsteins - Horicon, Wisconsin

"We feed a total of 140 head with 52 milking. Before our Knight Reel Auggie, feeding a TMR took us 1 1/2 hours twice a day. Now each feeding takes approximately 1/2 hour."

John and Harry Nooven
Brabantdale Farms - Narvan, Ontario, Canada

"We feed about 200 head per day with an average of 100 milking. We owned a 4-auger mixer before. Our Knight Reel Auggie has a shorter mixing time with a superior blended ration."

Wasne and Bradley Beidel
Beidel Brothers - Newbury, Pennsylvania

"We mix 5 loads per day to feed 650 head. Our Knight Reel Auggie mixes faster and unloads faster than the auger mixers that we previously owned. Drive through feeding with our tow model has cut our feeding time by two-thirds."

Warren and Dave Otto
Otto Farms - Valders, Wisconsin

CENTER-LINE DESIGN
Saves More Leaves Which Means More Milk In The Tank

The benefits of the Case International 8520 center-line rectangular baler for a smaller operation are many. Narrow transport width. Easy in-field maneuverability. Gentle handling of hay. Uniform bale shape. And, a budget-minded price.

You'll appreciate the 8520 with the first bale you make. A wide, low-profile pickup and center-line feeding mean more leaves end up in the bale, not on the ground.

And, if that's not enough, there are a number of options available. A hydraulic pickup lift, flotation tires, hydraulic density control, wagon hitch and a choice of bale chutes or hydraulic bale thrower with electric controls.

Stop in and find out more about the Case International 8520 rectangular baler.

BALE A TON EVERY 3 MINUTES

NOW FOR 1999

INTEREST WAIVER
TIL MAY '99

More and more farmers are making hay the big way. More farmers are buying square balers from Hooper, Inc. With three models to choose from, the reasons to buy a CASE IH big square baler are clear:

CASE IH big square bales are quick to handle, and that means you can be more productive. In fact, with a CASE IH big square baler you can bale up to 20 tons of hay per hour. And there's no stopping to tie and eject bales. That's 1 ton every 3 minutes.

CASE IH big square bales give you large transport payload. Since bales are stackable, you can fit more hay into a limited area. The bottom line is more bales of hay per truckload.

CASE IH 8575 & 8585 big square balers are built to handle high moisture hay and deliver consistent bale weight and density regardless of varying moisture conditions. CASE IH balers keep moisture in for better quality hay. Higher hay quality means more profits.

CASE IH big square balers are center-line balers and have an extra wide pick-up for increased capacity with less leaf loss. And a charge chamber preforms bale flakes for better leaf retention to ensure higher hay quality.

Hooper, Inc. has the experienced service mechanics who will keep your big square baler running strong. Hooper service people know balers and we know when your baler's down it's money out of your pocket. Wool Pool Set MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — The Annual Wool Pool sponsored by the Northeast Sheep and Wool Growers Association will be conducted at two sites.

On Monday, July 13, from noon until 7 p.m. and on Tuesday, July 14, from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m., wool will be received at the Wyoming County Fairgrounds located just west of Meshoppen on Rt. 6.

On Thursday, July 16, wool will be received at Furman's Warehouse, Duke and 4th St., Northumberland.

The northeast pool consists of sheep and wool producers in Wyoming, Susquehanna, Sullivan, Bradford, Wayne, and Northumberland counties and also serves adjacent fringe areas.

All wool must be presented at the skirting and grading table untied with bellies and tags out. Wet wool and wool with poly-contamination will be rejected. Mohair, Romanov fleeces, and fleeces from sheep that have been crossed with hair sheep cannot be accepted.

Producers with natural colored fleeces are advised to investigate the handspinner market where they may do better. The pool has a bid for colored fleeces but it is so low that it may not cover the cost of handling.

To keep the process moving as smoothly as possible, it is requested that wool packed in wool bags be removed before being placed on the skirting table or that side seams be opened. Producers are asked to be present while their wool is being graded to gain a better understanding of how it is being evaluated.

Each fleece will be examined by an ASI Certified Level 2 Classifier whose determination will be final.

In 1998 the northeast pool received higher bid prices than any other pool in the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association. It is interesting to note that Wellman, Inc., the buyer of the northeast consignment, purchased all but one of the Pennsylvania pools, but at significantly lower prices. Although the world wool market is depressed, it is gratifying to note that there is a reward for quality control.

For a number of years the Northeast Pool has been raising its quality control standards and rewarding producers with clean properly presented clips with lowers cost of handling charges than those for dirty and improperly handled ones. According to guidelines established by the ASI Wool Quality Improvement Summit, the 1991 clip will be sold on a clean-delivered basis.

Questions may be directed to Ginny Wright, president, at (717) 278-3924, or to Victor Decker, secretary, at (717) 833-2486.

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — The 1998 Pennsylvania Vegetable, Tree Fruit and Small Fruit Field Day is scheduled July 29 here at the Russell E. Larson Research Center Horticulture Research Farm.

The event is being sponsored jointly by Penn State University's College of Agricultural Sciences, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, and the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania.

Growers will have the opportunity to see first hand the research projects being conducted by Penn State researchers at the Research Center.

The schedule for the day's events is as follows:

• 8 a.m. — Registration at the Hort Farm. Coffee and donuts will be available.

• 9:15 a.m. — Tours of Research Plots at Hort Farm. Researchers and support staff will be in the field to answer questions and comment about their current research. Two tours will be available: A - Vegetables, Potatoes, Small Fruit & Cut Flowers - research plots dealing with weed control, variety evaluation, plasticulture and management of vegetable crop production. B - Tree Fruits.

• 11 a.m. — Tour of Research Plots at Plant Pathology Farm with Dr. Alan MacNab.

• 12:15 p.m. — Lunch - A catered meal is planned.

• 1:30 p.m. — Tours, Workshop and Demonstrations - Four options will be available to growers. A - Machinery and Field Demonstrations - planters, plastic mulch lifters, spading machines, plastic recovery equipment and other equipment. B - Plant Pathology Research Plots Tour with Dr. Alan MacNab (same as morning tour). C - Entomology Research Plots Tour with Dr. Shelby Fleischer. D - Workshop on recycling farm plastics with James Garthe.

• 5 p.m. — Adjourn.

Ohio Rootworm Damage Could Be High This Year

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Water-logged fields in southern Ohio could likely see crop injury and potential yield losses because of excessive rains in June that flooded very young corn plants.

Corn is especially vulnerable if floodwaters cover the crop for more than two days when the plant's growing point is below the soil surface, which is prior to the leaf collar stage or growth stage six, said Peter Thomison, an agronomist with Ohio State University. After 48 hours of flooding, the oxygen supply is usually depleted in the soil, and the plant cannot perform critical life functions.

Those kinds of conditions occurred in low-lying areas of southern Ohio's Jackson County, leaving farmers with some tough management decisions in waning moments of the planting season, said the county's extension agent Dave Samples.

"In our major creek bottoms, we have several places where water was over the corn for four days," Samples said.

Although excessive rainfall was unwelcome in southern Ohio as well as other parts of the water-weary Midwest, it broke a month-long dry spell in northwestern Ohio, one of the state's major crop production areas.

"Even where you had too much rain and there were pockets of ponding, the rest of the field really benefited," said Paul Houdashelt, manager of the Northwestern Branch of Ohio State's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wood County.

"We really needed the rainfall," Houdashelt said.

Ohio's No. 1 wheat, corn and soybean production county is Wood County. Neighboring counties consistently rank in the state's top 10 annual production for those crops.

As for farmers in water-logged areas such as Jackson County, Samples said they might consider replanting to shorter-season corn varieties, which take less time to reach maturity than earlier-planted corn. But time is fast running out in the planting season for any corn variety to reach maximum yield potential by fall. Farmers may also consider switching to soybean as long as their corn herbicide program is compatible with the crop, he said.

Corn planted with no-till or reduced-tillage practices on upland soils escaped flooding and are generally better off than crops in low-lying areas, Samples said. No-till and reduced-tillage practices are conservation methods that minimize soil losses to wind and water erosion.

Jackson County had a weekend reprieve from wet conditions June 19 to June 20, although other parts of the state got rainfall, Samples said. By June 22, the county had gone four days without rain, he said.

"The wheat is coming along real nicely," Samples said. "As for soybeans, the crops that are on better-drained soils are doing all right, but are still pale. The beans that saw water impounding are stunted, and we sustained losses there."

Thomison said that corn's chances for surviving a flood are better when the growing point is above the soil surface and also if temperatures are less than 77 degrees F during flooding.

"Since some of the corn in southern Ohio that was subjected to saturated soil conditions had not yet reached the six-leaf stage, there is potential for flooding and ponding injury," Thomison said.

Even if corn plants survive flooding, farmers' problems aren't over yet, Thomison said. The crop can see some longer-term production problems later in the growing season. A disease known as crazy top is a common problem in a wet year, and hybrids have limited resistance, Thomison said.

Symptoms of crazy top are rolling leaves or the proliferation of husks due to abnormal tissue growth. The fungus causing crazy top depends on saturated soils to infect corn seedlings, resulting in abnormal tissue development.

"That's been the potential characteristic in this bottom ground when you get the water over the corn," Samples said. "But corn smut seems to be more of a problem here than crazy top."

In addition excessive moisture during early growth stages can retard corn root development, Thomison said. If the weather turns dry, the roots will not be developed enough to reach deep into the soil moisture reserves.

Too much rain can also affect nitrogen fertilizers that farmers applied to their fields. "Flooding and ponding can also result in losses of nitrogen through denitrification and leaching," he said.

Farmers who suspect flooding injury can visually check the color of plants' growing points for damage potential, Thomison said. A darkened or softened growing point precedes plant death, while a white or cream-colored growing point indicate a healthy plant. To be sure, check fields for new leaf growth three to five days after water drains away.

The Ohio Agricultural Statistics Service reported that Ohio precipitation is almost two inches above normal for the growing season starting April 1. The state received 11.94 inches for the growing season as of June 21, the service reported. High-moisture regions are the southwest, west central and south central, which exceeded the precipitation norm, respectively, by 7.93 inches, 4.07 inches and 3.66 inches.

Farm Credit Boards Name New CEO

LEWISBURG, MERCER, YORK — The selection of a new CEO of the proposed consolidated Northeastern, PennWest and York Farm Credit association has been made.

Allyn L. Lamb, executive vice president and regional manager of First Pioneer Farm Credit, ACA, has been selected and approved by all three association boards to serve as CEO.

First Pioneer Farm Credit is headquartered in Enfield, Conn. It is a $11 billion association with 9,800 customers and covers territory in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, and New Hampshire. Lamb handled 3,500 customers and a $365 million loan volume. He received his bachelor's degree from Cornell University with concentrations in agricultural economics and vegetable crops, and completed 12 credit hours in the MBA program at Syracuse University.

Lamb has entered into a joint employment agreement with all three associations. The agreement states that Lamb is hereby employed by all three associations to serve as CEO to direct and supervise management of the three associations through each stage of the negotiations relating to the consolidation. He took office on June 15, 1998

Pioneer Names Technical Information Manager

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.)— Robin Newell, sales manager for the eastern sales area of Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. has announced that Carl Bannon has accepted the position of technical information manager, supporting the seed company's education and communication efforts across the northeastern United States.

A graduate of the University of Massachusetts with bachelor's and master's degrees in plant, soil, and weed sciences, Bannon has been with the Cornell Cooperative Extension Service since 1989, most recently as area field crop specialist in south central New York. A certified crop adviser, he brings to Pioneer extensive expertise in the disciplines of nutrient management, field crop production, and integrated pest management practices. He also has applied research experience with silages and has led dairy forage management training programs for eight years.

"Carl's credentials are impressive, and an ideal fit with our diverse needs across the northern states," said Newell. "Working to help our customers and sales force understand the vast array of new technologies that are impacting agricultural production. Carl will be a comfortable supporting the information needs of a small New York dairy producer looking to maximize the nutritional benefit of his forages as he will be with a large Maryland cash cropper interested in quality grain or oilseed traits."

Company To Market Rotary Parlors

MADISON, Wis. — Bou-Matic, a Company of DEC International, Inc., based here, announced that it will market rotary milking parlors in North America

Rotary parlors are unique in that cows are milked on a non-stop rotating platform while the milking technician stands in one place, prepping udders and attaching milking units

Known as a leader in stall systems technology, Bou-Matic markets rotary parlors in Australia, New Zealand, and many other countries. "The rotary style of milking is very popular in several international markets where we have installed more than 50 rotary parlors," said Joe Prazak, Bou-Matic marketing manager.

North American dairy operators are showing a renewed interest in rotary-style parlors. "So Bou-Matic will provide that technology in North America," said Prazak. "We will equip the Bou-Matic dealer network with factory-backed product support and specialized installation assistance."

Bou-Matic plans to offer the North American dairy producer a more rugged version of rotary parlor than typical non-USA manufactured rotary parlors. "This beefed-up rotary parlor will be better equipped to handle North American style dairying," said Prazak

New White Tractors Hit The Field

ATLANTA, Ga.—White has introduced six new tractor models, ready to hit the field this fall, that offer added convenience features, new low-profile styling, and power choices running from 70 to 145 PTO horsepower.

Four models are in the mid-range class, 70 to 110 PTO horsepower, and are additions to the White 6000 Series. The other two weigh in at 125 and 145 PTO horsepower, and are in the New White 8000 "Fieldmaster" Series.

All six are powered by newly designed Cummins B3.9 and B5.9 diesel engines, which makes the Cummins engines the standard powerplant in all White tractors, 70 hp and above.

The four mid-size models—6410 (70 hp), 6510 (85 hp), 6710 (95 hp) and 6810 (110 hp)—can be ordered with either an open ROPS platform or an all-new cab. The two "Fieldmaster" tractors—8310 (125 hp) and 8410 (145 hp)—are available with cabs.

"While these tractors have a lot of new styling and comfort features, for example low-profile sloping hoods for greater row-crop visibility, they also have the rugged features our customers have come to expect," said Steve Reiling, general marketing manager for White tractors. "That includes White's durable case iron main frame and the farm-proven Cummins engines."

"We put a lot of user-friendly features in these tractors, especially the cabs on the mid-range models," Reiling noted. "They come with double doors that allow the operator to enter and exit the machine from either side. We also increased hydraulic flow and lift capacity so they can handle more big jobs around the farm.

The 6410 and 6510 offer a choice of 12x4 partially synchronized transmissions or 12x12 fully synchronized transmissions with matched forward/reverse shuttle shifting. The 6710 and 6810 come with White's quadshift transmission as standard, with an optional creeper transmission available.

The two "Fieldmaster" tractors have quadrashift transmissions, but also offer an optional 18-speed powershift. Both transmissions offer forward/reverse shuttle shifting. Wet, multi-disc clutches, cooled and lubricated in hydraulic oil for extended life, are standard on all models.

The 70 and 85 horsepower models are powered by 4-cylinder B3.9 Cummins diesels with engine balancers for smooth, quiet operation. The 95, 110, 124, and 145 horsepower models come with 6-cylinder B5.9 Cummins engines.

All six models are available in either two wheel drive or with power front axle.

Vermeer Rolls Out Round Balers

PELLA, Iowa — Twenty five years after inventing the world's first big round baler, Vermeer is introducing a whole new family of them—the all-new Vermeer L-Series.

All four L-Series models — 504L, 505L, 604L and 605L — have undergone two years of extensive testing in all kinds of crops and conditions. All of them feature Vermeer's exclusive bottom drum roller design for better bale density and formation. A 5-bar floating pickup with rubber mounted pickup tines, Hay Saver wheels and smooth, wide 14-inch belts ensure gentle hay handling and positive hay-feeding action into the baler chamber.

The smallest one in the line is Vermeer's new 504L Baler. It produces a 5-foot diameter by 4-foot wide package, weighing up to 2,000 pounds, and is designed to bale both wet or dry hay. Therefore, using the same baler, an operator can choose to harvest dry bales or high-moisture hay/alfalfa at peak maturity without worrying about weather conditions. It also results in extra cuttings, higher quality feed, plus reduced additives and lower storage and equipment costs.

The Vermeer 505L produces a 5-foot diameter by 5-foot wide bale, weighing up to 1,400 pounds (2,000 pounds with an optional silage kit). A minimum 50 hp tractor requirement means it can produce quality, high-density bales without the need for higher horsepower and heavy-duty bale handling equipment. Like the 504L, the 505L features combination spring/hydraulic belt tension system for variable bale densities and sizes; therefore, bales can be tailored to the storage and handling preferences of the operator. Both models also feature a new full-sided, symmetrical fiberglass side panel design with convenient thumb-press latches. Bale ramps, Drop 'n Go ejection system and hydraulic pickup lift are optional on both 500 Series models.

The adjustable, hydraulic/pneumatic belt tension system on the new 600 Series models — 604L and 605L — allows operators to pre-select densities anywhere from light, soft-core bales, to giant, high-density packages that weigh up to 1,900 pounds and 2,400 pounds, respectively. Bale sizes also can be pre-selected from 24 inches to 72 inches in diameter on both models, to accommodate different handling, storage, and transport preferences.

The Vermeer 605L produces a 6-foot diameter by 5-foot wide bale and is designed for serious hay producers looking to maximize hay harvesting production per day in virtually any type of crop and condition, including corn stalks, fescue, wheat straw, cane, crop residues, peanut stubble, and timothy grass.

"Dairy producers are committed to operating profitable businesses, and Monsanto is dedicated to providing the tools, such as Posilac 1Step, to help them do so," said Pam Strifler, director of marketing, Monsanto Dairy Business. "Construction of this advanced production facility represents exciting business growth, as well as Monsanto's commitment to producers and the dairy industry as a whole."

According to Jeff Peterson, director of worldwide manufacturing, Monsanto Dairy Business, the new 150,000-plus square-foot facility will be equipped with highly-automated equipment, incorporating the most innovative technology in protein manufacturing. More than 100 people will be employed at the plant.

Somerset Jackpot Supreme Champion Is Shorthorn Heifer

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent
MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — When it came to a final decision for the supreme champion at the Somerset County Beef Jackpot Show, judge Steve Taylor, from Connersville, Ind., chose a Shorthorn heifer owned by Armstrong Farms, Saxonburg, Butler County, shown by John Allen.

The heifer had already defeated the other 14 entries to earn the grand champion heifer title. The heifer of Jeanette Hildreth won reserve.

Kevin Campbell, 16, of Sycamore, Greene County, had the grand champion steer, sired by Foreplay.

Tammi Grubb, 17, from Hanover in York County had the reserve champion steer, sired by Winks Polled Cornhusker.

The county exhibitor champion was awarded to Jason Fisher, as was the county club calf champion. The steer was sired by Play-It-Again.

champion, from Rockwood, was Luke Svonavec.

Taylor, who is the marketing representative for Umbarger Show Feeds, in his closing statement at the show's end said he was even more impressed this year with the quality he saw in the steers than when he came last year and saw outstanding animals.

"The quality of the steers is outstanding," he said, adding that in at least 40 of them he saw the potential to be shown anywhere in North America. Another 20 he said were ideal for county fairs.

One quality he liked in Campbell's steer was there was more expression in the muscles, a competitive attribute worthy of a show ring, the carcass class, and against other cattle.

"I want to express my sincere appreciation for being invited back," Taylor said. "You have a great, great set of kids."

The show was sponsored by the Somerset County Beef Producers and Pennsylvania Cattleman's Association which was represented by its beef princess, Heather Fuls, the trophy and ribbon presenter from Richland, Berks County.

The club calf winner and county exhibitor trophies for Jason Fisher's steer are being held by Heather Fuls, Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association beef princess. Jason Fisher was recovering from a broken arm, so Brad Fisher is showing the steer. Judge Steve Taylor is center.

Harford County Team Wins Maryland Envirothon

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — A team of five students from Fallston High School in Harford County recently beat out teams from more than 15 counties across the state to win the Maryland Envirothon, an annual two-day outdoor natural resources competition for high school students.

This year's event was held June 18-20 at the Lathrop E. Smith Environmental Education Center in Montgomery County, Maryland.

As winners of the Maryland Envirothon, Harford team members Julie Weil, Mary Hryncewich, Catherine Wurster, Eric Genso, Andrew Cook, Christy Donhauser, and coach Thomas Trafton will now go on to represent the state at the National Envirothon slated for July 27 in East Lansing, Mich. More than 35 teams from the United States and Canada are expected to compete at the national event. During the past five years, Maryland teams have consistently placed in the top 10 percent at national competitions.

Established in 1991, the objectives of the Maryland Envirothon are twofold — to test student's environmental knowledge and understanding of state resource issues and to motivate young people to care for the environment by practicing stewardship in their homes, schools, and communities. Since its inception, the program has grown from 250 students to more than 1,000 students this year. The competition is sponsored by the Maryland Association of Soil Conservation Districts and the State Soil Conservation Committee.

"This year's event was the most competitive yet, with only five points separating the second through seventh place teams," said Craig Hartsock of the Allegany Soil Conservation District, one of the event's organizers.

"The team from Harford County was truly outstanding, placing tops in the categories of forestry, wildlife, and watersheds. I believe Harford will represent Maryland very well at the National Envirothon next month in Michigan," he said.

The Maryland Envirothon is held once a year at an outdoor environmental education center. Students taking part in the competition have been studying Maryland's natural resources for the past year in hopes of winning.

Working in teams of five (with one to two alternates), students are trained and tested in four natural resources areas including soil, aquatics, forestry, and wildlife, plus a current environmental issue that changes from year to year. This year's issue was watersheds.

The students — who hail from virtually every region in the state — rotate through the various test stations where they are asked to identify and categorize living resources, perform soil surveys, and solve other complex natural resource issues. The team with the highest cumulative total wins the competition and the opportunity to represent Maryland at the National Envirothon.

At the 1998 competition, the Harford team scored 449 points out of a possible 500. They were followed by teams from Howard County (420 points), Baltimore County (418 points), and Washington County (417 points).

The first Envirothon competition was held in Pennsylvania in 1979. Since then, more than 30 states, Canada, and Australia have embraced the program and sent teams to the national competition in late summer.

Contributors and supporters of the Maryland Envirothon Program also include the Maryland Department of Agriculture, National Resources and Environment, the Cooperative Extension Service, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service.

Sycamore Trees Suffer From Fungus

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, July 4, 1998-D7

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Department of Agriculture field personnel report that sycamore trees across Maryland, and much of the Mid-Atlantic, are once again showing symptoms of infection by the sycamore anthracnose fungus.

sycamores this spring.

The cool, moist conditions the region experienced early this spring favor the development of the fungus. Young leaves, as they emerge from buds, become infected. These infected leaves soon turn brown, shrivel, and die. The fungus also can kill new shoots and cause cankers on twigs and small branches.

By late spring, as the weather becomes warmer and dryer, the fungus growth slows, and healthy leaves and shoots develop. Although sycamores look as if they are dying, most trees will survive.

Chemical control of sycamore anthracnose usually is not necessary and, by this time of year, is not recommended. Any spray program to control the disease should be done in early spring at bud break, and continue during the cool, wet spring conditions. This year, heavy nitrogen fertilization should be avoided since this produces lush growth that is susceptible to fungal infection.

Other hardwood trees, especially oaks, also have been affected this spring by anthracnose diseases, which are caused by different species of fungi on other kinds of trees. As with sycamores, most trees are able to survive the infection and, by mid-summer, with warmer dryer conditions, most will once again appear healthy.

For more information, please contact Dr. Robert Rabaglia, Maryland Department of Agriculture, (410) 841-5922.

BIG IS NOT NECESSARILY BAD FOR THE ENVIRONMENT: NUTRIENT MANAGEMENT PRACTICES OF PENNSYLVANIA SWINE FARMERS Tom Parsons, V.M.D., Ph.D.

Assistant Professor of Swine Production Medicine

Kimberly Klesse
Summer Fellow in Nutrient Management

New Bolton Center
School of Veterinary Medicine
University of Pennsylvania

As the American swine industry enters the 21st century, the major challenge it faces is the environment. Heightened environmental awareness by producers, neighbors, and consumers alike demands that pork production proceed in harmony with preservation of the land, water, and air. Moratoriums on the construction of new swine operations are being put in place by state governments across the country in the name of environmental concern. However, in some cases, these controversial policy decisions are fueled in part by public fears about many other aspects of large-scale swine production, such as absentee ownership and potential odor-problems.

A similar moratorium on the construction of large farms or so-called concentrated animal feeding operations (CAFOs) has resulted from recent actions by the Pennsylvania State Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). A federal mandate on water quality has called for revision of state CAFO permitting requirements. Despite the fact that existing Pennsylvania laws are some of the country's most progressive and stringent concerning farm nutrient management, DEP has suspended final decisions on all CAFO permit applications until changes in the permitting process are finalized. This de facto moratorium on construction of new swine facilities effectively halts further expansion of the Pennsylvania swine industry.

Potential problems with water quality created by growth in the local swine industry have long been recognized. Much of our Pennsylvania swine industry is located within the Susquehanna River Basin watershed, one of the major tributaries of the Chesapeake Bay. Deteriorating water quality in the Bay has changed both fish and plant life there. These changes have focused the attention of concerned commercial fishermen, recreational users, and ecologists on agriculture's contribution to non-point source pollution in the Bay. Thus, the environmental impact of the Pennsylvania swine industry has come under great scrutiny.

Production of pork by the next generation of Pennsylvania swine farmers will require environmentally sound management practices. Paramount to continued swine production in this state is both the opportunity for the industry to ex-

More Than 170 Riders In Handicapped Riders Event

MALVERN (Chester Co.) — The 19th annual Handicapped Riders Event of the Devon Horse show took place on Saturday, May 23 here at the Thorncroft Equestrian Center.

More than 170 riders entered the show, and competed in more than 60 different classes.

Riders of all ages and disabilities, mental and physical, competed in trail, equitation, jumping, and dressage classes, and a combined driving event (cones, dressage, and cross country marathon). The show, sponsored by Brushwood Stables in Malvern, is put on by the joint efforts of Thorncroft Equestrian Center and The Bryn Mawr Rehab Hospital.

On Sunday, May 24, the division champions from the Saturday classes met at the Devon Horse Show Grounds in the Dixon Oval to compete in the grand championship class. Barbara Rosoff of Phoenixville and Babsie Clark of Kirkwood, judged in the class. Riders were asked to ride as a group and perform individual tests.

Grand champion was awarded to John Greenwood of Grantville. Erica Freed, also of Grantville, was reserve. John was presented the Hopc Montgomery Scott Perpetual Trophy. Scott was a long-time supporter of riding for the handicapped. She won the trophy herself at the Bryn Mawr Horse Show in 1930, and in 1993 donated it to The Handicapped Riders Event of the Devon Horse Show.

One of the many additional trophies awarded was the Brushwood (for best handicapped rider), won by Bernadette McMullen of Special Equestrians in Pineville and donated by Mrs. J. Maxwell Moran of Brushwood Stables in Malvern. Moran has been a generous supporter of the show and a tireless volunteer the day of the event.

Also participating at Devon were the Thorncroft Mainstreamers. The group is an eight-horse, nine-rider team consisting of handicapped and non-handicapped riders ages 8-20. These ambassadors to Thorncroft have travelled to New York, Virginia, and Harrisburg to present their drill.

pand and the development of cost-effective solutions to nutrient management problems. With regard to the latter point, we recently concluded a survey of management practices by Pennsylvania swine farmers'. The goal of our study was to identify opportunities for novel and innovative, yet cost-effective, solutions to swine nutrient management. We have documented striking differences between swine operation in their ability to capitalize on nutrient management advances. Perhaps to the surprise of some, of the farms surveyed, we have found that the large ones can be twice as likely as the small to implement environmentally superior nutrient management programs. These results suggest that the small farm, not the large farm, could be the more immediate threat to the environment in Pennsylvania. These findings are described in detail below.

Nutrients flow through a farm or production system as part of a cycle. Feed becomes meat and manure, manure is applied to crops, and crops become feed. A ration poorly matched to a pig's growth requirements will result in excess nutrients in the manure as they pass unused through the animal. When such manure is applied over and above the needs of a crop, excess nutrients remain in the soil. Such excess nutrients are at risk of being lost from the cycle to the environment. Leaching or runoff of these excess nutrients result in pollution of the environment. Thus, we questioned swine producers about manure handling, as well as cropping and animal nutrition practices.

Study farms were categorized by operation type (sow unit or finish floor), then stratified by size. Farms with >600 sows or >2000 head of grow-finish pigs were considered large. Demographics of study herds are shown in Table I. Producer responses to the 8 questions listed in Table II are summarized in Table III.

The major finding of our survey was that large swine units are on average 1½ to 2 times more likely to implement environmentally sound nutrient management practices. Large swine operations more often used progressive nutritional practices such as split sex feeding or phase feeding that reduce or limit nutrient load in the manure. Large swine units are also more aware of their manure nutrient content and more capable of effectively utilizing this information (e.g. keep records of manure application and apply manure with a calibrated spreader).

Why is a large swine unit more likely to have implemented environmentally-sound management practices? The larger size unit may be able to capture benefits associated with economies of scale in nutrient management. For instance, large operations can afford to mix and feed a larger number of diets, or use contract manure handlers that provide better access to technologies for progressive manure management practices. The large swine unit is also more likely to exceed the two-animal unit/acre criterion. Thus, there are environmental benefits from the increased scrutiny of these large producers by existing state nutrient management regulations.

The results of this study suggest that big is not necessarily bad for the environment when it comes to swine nutrient management. Large swine units can be more likely than small farms to utilize progressive, environmentally conscious nutrient management practices. In theory, the possibility of catastrophic failure of manure storage facilities on such large or concentrated animal farm operations provides a great potential risk to the environment. However, existing regulations require that these facilities have adequate construction, monitoring and safety systems to prevent such an unqualified environmental disaster. A corollary of our work, perhaps contrary to popular belief, is that small swine producers could represent a more immediate threat to the environment. In the future, smaller producers must become more pro-active with regard to environmental concerns and implement more progressive nutrient management practices.

To facilitate the goal of increased environmental awareness among all Pennsylvania swine farmers, we are conducting an environmental educational program in collaboration with the National Pork Producers Council and the Pennsylvania State Cooperative Extension Service. If you are interested in participating in the Environmental Assurance Program which aims to promote an active understanding of issues such as manure management, odor control and neighbor relations, call either Kimberly Klesse (610-444-5800 ext 2345) or Bob Mikesell (814-865-2987) to schedule a farm visit.

1-Previous nutrient management fellows at the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine, Wayne Hassinger and Kelli Monahan, designed the survey, then collected and analyzed the data described here. This work was generously supported by a grant from the Pennsylvania Friends of Agriculture Foundation.

Recently, weather reports showed unseasonably warm temperatures in Arkansas and Texas, triple digit weather? I haven't heard of disastrous effects on poultry production in that area, but certainly without adequate house and bird management preparation, mortality, morbidity, reduced gain and inefficiency of performance would have occurred. In areas in the South, the producers expect the weather to turn warm to hot and make plans to ameliorate the effects.

If they don't prepare, they suffer the consequences. As the old saying goes if you fail to plan, you plan to fail. The time to prepare for avoiding the effects of high ambient temperature is now. The two strategies that are used to diminish the effects of high temperature on poultry are maintenance of ventilation equipment and reviewing what to do in when high temperatures endanger your poultry flock.

Many times we get distracted and forget to prepare for the advent of summer weather. It is usually the early heat spell that causes the greatest damage and loss of birds due to heat stress than when birds have been gradually acclimated to higher temperatures in the middle of the summer.

Therefore, take the covers off your tunnel fans, get your migration fences out, reset the phases on your computer controls or think about what has to be done as far as ventilation and fogging and at what temperatures. If you can't remember, find someone who does know before you are in the middle of a crisis. Also, remind your employees what needs to be done in high heat and humidity situations.

The first equipment that comes to mind in making sure you are prepared for summer weather is your fans. Fans are rated for a particular efficiency to work within your house, but if they have dirty blades, if the wire mesh is coated with dust, if the shutters are stuck and dirty, and if the fan belt is loose, then you are losing precious air velocity and volume that should be used to ventilate your birds.

The next machinery that needs attention is the fogging system. Have you taken the nozzles out and soaked them in vinegar or some solution to get them clean and clear from particles that might inhibit their ability to deliver the right volume of water and in the right droplet size to maximize evaporative cooling? If not, now is the time. The pump also needs to be checked and water line rinsed and sanitized.

Other strategies to remember during high heat situations are to remove the feed from the bird in the heat of the day. The reason is that the consumption of feed produces heat during digestion and adds to the heat stress of the birds. One effective way to get this done is to raise the feed line while there is still feed in it early in the morning.

Raising the feed line gives the birds added floor space and allows all birds to eat all the way down the feeder line when the feed is returned to the birds. Otherwise, the birds cause stress and carcass damage as they crowd the feeders when the auger fills the feed pans. On the other hand, water helps to cool birds. We have found that the water in the water lines rapidly reach ambient temperatures. That means, when the temperature reaches 95 degrees in the house, the temperature of the water in the line is 95 degrees and inhibits some consumption by the birds. Where are the water lines usually placed in poultry houses? Near the ceiling, one of the hotter places in the house. Flushing of hot water lines is thought of as a good strategy.

However, when the temperature reaches 95 degrees or higher, birds don't drink much no matter what the temperature of the water. Therefore, refreshing water lines is of more value toward the end of the day when the birds go back on feed. Because of the feed and water, refusal by birds during very high temperatures, the other strategies of increasing airflow over the birds, evaporative cooling and feed removal during the heat of the day become very important management techniques.

The story is told of the employee who listed in his job application that his greatest asset was his ability to sleep when the wind blows. When the strong winds came, the employer went to check out his farm and found all in order because his employee had been prepared and was fast asleep in the barn. May you be able to sleep when the temperature gets hot because your houses are properly prepared and your equipment is properly maintained

"Hi-Moisture Shelled Corn"

You know the advantages of hi-moisture shelled corn versus dry corn for animal feeding. So now consider the many advantages of POURED CONCRETE to store and protect your valuable grain.

"Our 6" thick concrete walls reflect 38% of light beams, resulting in 780 times more heat-resisting ability than steel, and 25 times more insulating power than steel."

"Our 6" thick walls have a very low leak potential compared to prefab silos of any kind, and a very low maintenance requirement."

IN ALUMINUM BODIES
EBY BUILDS IT

M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24', landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- LANDSCAPE BODIES - Lengths to 12', We'll build to your specs!

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer customer options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business - building bodies to haul it is ours.

PURINA DAIRY HERD PROFILE

"Feed Costs... Radically Reduced"

JMJ Springpond Registered Holstein Farm began in 1989 when Jeffrey, Michael and Jennifer Davis, children of Ray and Francis Davis, wanted to farm. A farm near their home in Berks County near Leesport became available about the time Jeff and Mike graduated from high school. The siblings had been raising and successfully showing 4-H animals so they put their animals in a "JMJ" partnership and purchased additional cows to begin their dairy operation. Dad worked off the farm.

The family continues to be successful, milking 60 cows that continue to increase in production and show fine type with 12 or more cows classified VG to 89 points. It was the production part of the business that brought the Davis family to Purina.

"We were at a stalemate in early 1997," Mike said. "We thought we could get more milk but the feed cost was going up and up and we were not getting any more milk.

"We switched to Purina in April last year and we could tell a big difference within six weeks. Not only were we getting more milk, our feed costs were radically reduced. Purina's program put us on more home-grown roughages with less purchased feed. They balanced our haylage, corn silage, and high moisture corn in such a way that made it good for the cows and good for our bottom line."

Today the top record in the herd is 38,000m. Twelve cows are milking over 100 pounds per day and the herd average is over 24,000m an increase of 3,000 pounds of milk in 14 months since changing to Purina feeds without using BST. And while milk production increased, butter fat and protein held to previous levels.

Another major improvement is breeding efficiency. Before the move to Purina, first-time conception rate was 33 percent. Now they have a rate of 51 percent, a definite indicator of improved herd health. Of course, calves, heifers, and dry cows are fed Purina feeds.

"After we switched to Purina, feed costs went down and milk production went up," Mike said. "And production is still increasing. I can certainly recommend Purina's programs and their farm consultants like Dave Kiebach to other farmers. In fact, based on what we have experienced in our own herd, I have already done this."
